

Bernstorff Thinks Wilson Should Wait Advice of Germany

Denial of Responsibility for Sinking of Arabic Expected in Washington When Germany Speaks

BERLIN TO AWAIT REPORT OF SUBMARINE

WASHINGTON, August 24.—FURTHER THAN AN UNOFFICIAL SUGGESTION FROM COUNT VON BERNSTORFF, GERMAN AMBASSADOR, THAT THE UNITED STATES TAKE NO ACTION IN THE ARABIC CASE UNTIL THE OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT HAD BEEN RECEIVED, THE ARABIC SITUATION REMAINED UNCHANGED TODAY. PRESIDENT WILSON IS DISINCLINED TO GO FURTHER THAN DIRECT AMBASSADOR GIRARD TO INQUIRE AT THE GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE IF A REPORT FROM THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER SUPPOSED TO BE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SINKING OF THE ARABIC. THIS ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN, BUT NO REPLY HAS YET BEEN RECEIVED FROM BERLIN.

Because of the distance the submarines operate from their base, and unsatisfactory means of communication with them, it is not believed that an official report of the Arabic outrage will be received in Berlin within a fortnight.

In the meantime state department officials and President Wilson's personal aides at the white house are gathering every possible bit of information for the President's consideration when the time for action comes. There seems to be a general disposition to await Germany's explanation of the incident, with the full expectation that some form of a denial of responsibility for the loss of the Arabic will follow.

New York, August 24.—Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, this afternoon issued the following statement on the Arabic case:

"The United States government should hold up any action regarding the Arabic incident until an official statement can be received from the German government."

CLEARFIELD BOY IN GOLD MEDAL CONTEST AT OSCEOLA

One of the items of particular interest in the Clearfield county W. C. T. U. convention at Osceola Mills September 2 and 3, is a Gold Medal Contest on Thursday evening, September 2. The following young people will compete for a gold medal: Elizabeth Donaldson, DuBois; Marion Bowes, Osceola Mills; Margaret Crawford, DuBois; Ruth Twigg, Curwensville; Gerie Johnston, Clearfield; Lucille Dunn, DuBois; and Grace Lydie, Mahaffey. Many of the best speakers in the county have competed for and won other medals. But two gold medals have been awarded. Both were won by sisters, Misses Ruth and Florence Garath, of Mahaffey, the first being awarded at DuBois, the second at Westover.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE

"T See Ourselves As Others See Us"
A Unique Story From R. F. D.
No. 2

A young man of "these parts" started to go with a young lady, and many tongues were wagging about the "match", when the wedding would be, when suddenly he quit going with her.

A friend asked him why he got "cold feet" and he replied: "I read in a paper of a factory in Massachusetts that makes 20,000 rolling pins every day."

TODAY'S REPORTS FROM BERLIN BY UNITED PRESS

(By United Press)
Berlin, August 24.—General Macdonald's troops have stormed and captured Kopytov on the southwest front of the Brest-Litovsk line.

A German submarine has torpedoed and sunk a Russian auxiliary ship off the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. It was officially announced this afternoon. Presumably the ship is one of those at the entrance to the gulf of Riga.

Russia is facing bankruptcy and is unable to fill the ranks and put an army of 8,000,000 to the front according to newspapers. The papers state there is to be a second meeting of the financial committee of the Russian Imperial council.

RUSSIA RESPONSIBLE

(By United Press)
Berlin, August 24.—That Russia was largely responsible for the last Balkan war, is now the statement printed in the North German Gazette.

Subscribe for The Progress.

FIFTH REGIMENT BAND TO GIVE CONCERT THURSDAY

Special Occasion Will Bring Out Full Attendance of the Band

Another of the excellent concerts of Leopold's Fifth Regiment band is to be given Thursday night, the occasion being a special one because of the gathering of the full band preparatory to the trip to Philipsburg Friday with the Clearfield Fire department. Director Leopold promises a complete new program, which will include but one of the number played at the concert two weeks ago. This will be a medley which is to be rendered by special request.

A full program of the concert will be published in the newspapers tomorrow. As usual the concert will start at eight o'clock, and will last for more than an hour. The bandstand will be erected at the court house corner and a large attendance is expected.

PLAYGROUND BENEFIT IS ATTRACTING MUCH NOTICE

Kids Sell Many Tickets to Entertainment at Globe Thursday Evening

The youngsters who are selling tickets for the benefit to be given at the Globe theatre Thursday evening are meeting with gratifying success. Several hundred tickets have already been disposed of, and it is expected that fully a thousand will attend the splendid show that has been booked by Manager Driggs.

The benefit is being held under the auspices of the Women's club, and is to raise funds for the playground movement. The season will soon close and the club faces a deficit in its budget for playground work, which it is hoped to raise in the receipts from the show.

PHILIPSBURG LADIES ATTEND A LUNCHEON

Mrs. H. B. Douglas of Clearfield formerly of Philipsburg, entertained a party of ladies on Saturday at a beautiful appointed luncheon in honor of Mrs. Williams of Carnegie, who with her family, is occupying the Hale home on Prospective street.

COMMITTEE MEETING

The advertising committee of the Automobile tour will meet in the Arbitration room of the court house tonight at 8:00 sharp. The chairman of the other committees for the tour have been invited to attend for the purpose of exchanging ideas and formulate a slogan for the campaign.

BUFFET LUNCH

There will be a buffet lunch given this evening at the residence of Mrs. Josephine Williams for the benefit of the A. M. E. church. All are welcome. Lunch 10 cents

MEETING OF WHIST CLUB

The Hospital Bridge Whist Club will meet with Mrs. F. B. Irwin, Wednesday afternoon August 25 at two o'clock.

GENERAL WOOD WATCHING BUSINESS MEN TRAINING TO BE SOLDIERS

Plattsburg, New York.—An unusual photograph of Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the department of the east, U. S. A., watching from behind a fence, the business men who are in the military training camp here, rapidly becoming capable soldiers and defenders of their country. In a talk to the men who are encamped here he said in part: "As 'As Thomas Jefferson said to Monroe: 'We must train and organize all our male citizens and make military instruction compulsory in our colleges. Until we do, we will not be safe. That is true today. WE MUST HAVE A SYSTEM OF TRAINED CITIZEN SOLDIERY SIMILAR TO THAT OF SWITZERLAND AND AUSTRALIA.' A standing army of 60,000 men for our insular possessions and one of 175,000 for duty in this country was needed."

BERRY PICKER IS FINDER OF GASTLY REMAINS IN WOODS

Young Boy Finds Skeleton Of Suicide In Bushes Near Philipsburg

Investigation of District Attorney Reveals Identity of Man As One Demented Who Lived at Morrisdale and Disappeared a Month Ago.

A small Morrisdale boy stumbled on a horrible find yesterday while picking berries near that town when he uncovered the decomposed body of Andrew Lepvar, a miner, who had been missing from his home in Morrisdale for a month.

Every indication pointed to suicide. When Coroner J. J. Polium and District Attorney Walter Welch arrived on the scene this morning the first thing they found was a leather belt with a noose in it hanging in a tree beneath which the body was found. The skull of the corpse detached from the body, the picture was readily drawn of the dead man hanging himself from the tree with his own belt. The body remained exposed to the elements for a month, during which decomposition rendered it practically a skeleton. Its weight wrenched the head from the body.

The District Attorney's investigation resulted in establishing the identity of the skeleton. It proved to be Andrew Lepvar who disappeared from his home in Morrisdale Mines about a month ago. He had been sick for over a year and had become demented. Once before he tried to end his life by hanging.

Paul McGuire, the fourteen year old son of Paul McGuire Sr., of Morrisdale, who was out picking berries yesterday morning in company with several other lads made the ghastly find in a thicket above the old Lepvar mine, now being operated by H. B. Bios.

Members of the state Constabulary were soon on the spot but allowed no one to touch the remains until District Attorney Welch's appearance.

Subscribe for The Progress.

MOTORCYCLE CRASH AT BREWERY DEATH CURVE YESTERDAY

Clyde Murray Smashes Into Thomas Langsford and Is Badly Cut

Motorcycle Thrown Several Yards by Impact With Automobile—Lands on Top of Young Man—Legs and Ankles Injured.

Another chapter was added to the history of Clearfield's motor accidents when Clyde Murray, riding a motorcycle, and Thomas Langsford, of Surveyor Run, driving an automobile, came together in a head-on collision at the worst death trap in Clearfield county, the Brewery Hill curve.

Langsford was coming up the hill and Murray, returning home from his work, was coming down. The crash came at the center of the curve and Murray was thrown several yards, the motorcycle falling on top of him. He was badly cut about the legs and ankles, and bruised about the body. The responsibility for the accident is about evenly divided as Murray was riding in the middle of the street, and Langsford was not paying attention to the road. Murray's machine was badly bent and twisted while the auto escaped with slight damages.

BAD GANG OF CRIMINALS DISCOVERED AT PUNXY

A band of youthful criminals, thoroughly organized and bound together by the death tie, was unearthed at Punxutawney yesterday by the police who have been mystified by a number of robberies which this juvenile band committed.

Their crimes run from petty thieving to highway robbery. The last offense committed was that of highway robbery, when they led two drunks to an out of the way place and then slugged them with a "billy" and went through their pockets.

Five of the band have been apprehended and will not tell the names of the remainder saying that their comrades would kill them if they told. This fact convinces the police that the band is thoroughly organized.

EVENTS IN THE WAR ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

- Germans renew offensive in North France, but Paris reports French, English, and Belgians are holding them in check. German report is that 10,000 French have been taken prisoners and Longwy captured.
- Belgium denies Namur has fallen, saying blowing up of one fort caused report.
- Zeppelin drops bombs on Antwerp, killing seven, and is brought down by artillery fire near city.
- Invading Russian army defeated by Germans at Stollupnen, cavalry contributing to German success.
- Russia reports two great armies advancing over 70-mile front into East Prussia.
- Premier Asquith tells Parliament that the war probably will strain empire's resources and entail sacrifices.
- Three thousand Russians leave Vladivostok to join in attack of Japanese on Tsing-Tao.
- Servia announces clearing of her soil of Austrian troops by battle at Sabac.
- Premier Salandra assures Italian deputies that mobilization is not imminent.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS WILL PICNIC AT PARK

The Knights of Columbus will hold an outing and basket picnic at the Clearfield driving park tomorrow in which the Clearfield Council No. 409 will participate.

An excellent program has been arranged which will provide amusement for all the people attending. There are races, dashes, jumps, etc. which are arranged for the married men, single men, boys, girls and ladies. There will also be dancing on the pavilion.

A free bus will leave the K. of C. rooms for the park at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. and returning will leave the park at 6 to 8 p. m.

RESERVE YOUR PLACES

All those wishing reservation for supper at the Country club this week should communicate with Mrs. B. D. Swoope, at Curwensville.

ENGLAND KNOWS FRANCE IS NOT SATISFIED WITH HER

Admit With Sincere Regret That France Has Some Ground for Complaint

London Being Fortified, Strikes Have Been Remedied—Britain Expects to Stop the French Discontent in Near Future.

Note:—The following article is in reply to that of William Philip Simms Paris correspondent of the United Press, in which France's dissatisfaction with England's efforts as an ally was told. Simms sent a copy of his article to Keen in London.

BY ED. L. KEEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 11 (My mail) England knows France is not satisfied with her. The showing Great Britain has made with her land forces has not all that France has had a right to expect.

While the despatch from William Philip Simms, the United Press correspondent in Paris probably reveals to America for the first time the extent of the French discontent, it relates facts which are well known to Britons.

Britons admit, with sincere regret that France has had some ground for her complaints. But they predict that in the very near future the allies will have no basis for criticism.

Britons do not deny the French charge contained in Simms' article, that the Britons are fortifying London with a double row of defense. The Britons are looking square in the face the remote possibility that the British Isles may be invaded by Germany. London has been preparing for invasion for a long time. Great Britain will do her best to keep the possible invaders away from Calais and the French criticism that the British are thoughtlessly worrying more about London than they are about Calais is not well received in London. Calais may be on French soil but the British realize that it is the German gateway to London and

Boston Co. Will Not Do Business In State of Georgia

Does Not Want to Sell Atlanta Or Of Its Citizens Until State Takes Action In Frank Case

A UNIQUE PROTEST AGAINST INACTIVITY

DESPITE SINKING OF SHIPS ENGLAND ADVERTISES TRIPS

Newspapers Advertise Trips to Panama-Pacific Exposition

(By United Press)

London, Aug. 24.—A hull trawler under the command of Boyle was sunk by a German submarine today. Three of the crew were drowned and nine others were rescued. Despite the constant sinking of English vessels by German submarines, the London newspapers are advertising extensively advising no one to miss a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition. Reports from Copenhagen that Germany has apologized to Denmark for violating Danish territorial waters to fire upon a British submarine, were received today from the war office.

MUCH SPEED TO GET THE MATRIMONIAL KNOT TIED

Two young people, one from Clearfield and the other from Grampian, were in an awful rush to get married last evening at Curwensville. After rushing to the justice of the peace's office and finding him not in they made a bee line for the first preacher in sight.

They were rushed around in a jitney car from Clearfield and nearly exhausted the patience of both the driver and the machine. Finally they were married in time to catch the B. & P. train to DuBois from whence they journeyed to their happy honeymoon.

The bride is Iva Rafferty and the groom is Willard Horn. Many wishes for a happy married life follow them from their friends.

INDIANA AUTOMOBILISTS ARE COMING TO CLEARFIELD

One Hundred Machines Will Pay Visit to Town Saturday Evening

The Indiana Automobile club is planning a visit to Clearfield next Saturday evening which promises to be the biggest thing of its kind ever to happen locally. A full hundred machines, with probably three hundred passengers, will arrive here Saturday evening between five and six o'clock. Dinner has been arranged for at the Dining, and a dance is to follow to which many local society people have been asked. The party will remain in Clearfield overnight, making the return trip to Indiana Sunday morning.

"PEACE SCHEME" PLOTTED IN GERMANY—NEWSPAPERS

(By United Press)
London, August 24.—"A Big Peace Scheme," is being plotted in Germany is the headline in the Amsterdam Daily Chronicle today, to be unearthed within a fortnight if Germany's plans do not miscarry the correspondent says.

that it must be defended to England's utmost. However, if the British fall at Calais, they must be prepared to make their last stand at London.

It is true, as the French point out, that strikes have hampered the British but that defect is being remedied thanks to the efficient work and inspiring appeals of the new minister of munitions Lloyd George. Twenty-six new national arsenals have been started within the past month and 100,000 British workmen have offered their services in this connection.

Now that they know the truth of the empire's grave peril the workmen of England have decided to quit striking.

The Englishman quoted by Simms as saying that the army of 3,000,000 men in England were supplied with wooden guns, was exaggerating conditions. For the most part the men in training have rifles. It is true that thousands may be seen daily in the parks of London drilling with wooden guns but these men are Home Defense Guards, men who are unable due to physical or other disabilities, to enlist in the regular service and even they will shortly be supplied with excellent rifles.

Atlanta, August 24.—A queue of protest against the murder of M. Frank was disclosed today by officials in the publication of the city of a Boston firm to an inquiry the Atlanta city government caulked yarn and tools.

Until the state of Georgia taken official action looking to the apprehension and punishment of men who murdered Leo M. Frank, do not care to quote the city of Atlanta or any of its citizens price any of our commodities," read theprising communication, which from a firm with long established business connections with the city.

City officials declined to offer comment on the unusual arraignment of the state for its inaction in murdering the perpetrators of the Frank murder, but readily gave the content of the letter to the press.

BRADY TOWNSHIP ALUMNI PICNIC

The Brady Township Alumni Association of Central State Normal School, Lock Haven, held their picnic at Luthersburg, on August 22. There were fifty in attendance including alumni friends of the school.

Professor W. C. Long, of Lock Haven represented the alumni and gave a very interesting address.

The greatest function of the day occurred at one o'clock when all called to dinner and found a table spread with all kinds of dainties. The afternoon was spent in playing various games and recalling reminiscences of days spent as "Dons Normal." The last game of the place was a good old fashioned game of "hide and seek" after which all said farewell, hoping to return next year.

JUDGE INSTRUCTS MEN TO IMPROVE MOUNTAIN ROAD

Bad Condition of Road Leads Judge to Instruct

Complaints made by the DuBois automobile club to Judge Bell about the condition of the "Mountain Road" between Penfield and Sabals resulted in the judge notifying the supervisors to get busy and fix up the road.

The condition of the road at present is such that it is used but the "Mountain Road" is one of the most beautiful drives in the county and is greatly enjoyed by large numbers when in good condition.

Judge Bell notified the supervisors that he would do what he could to the matter and accordingly wrote the supervisors a letter about it.

FILES PETITION FOR JUDGESHIP IN OTHER COUNTY

(By United Press)
Harrisburg, August 24.—Shirley Fulton, of Fayette county, has filed nomination petitions for the judgeship in Washington county. This is the first instance where a person in the county filed nomination for the judgeship in another.

STOCK QUOTATIONS

(Quotations furnished by telegraph by Clearfield, Fulton & Cannon, 1015 Erie building, Philadelphia.)
Opening 9:30 a. m.

RAILROADS
Atchafalpa	100%
B. & O.	99%
Can. Pac.	100%
St. Paul	99%
St. M. & N. Y. C.	100%
N. Y. C.	100%
N. Y. C.	100%
Penn.	100%
Reading	100%
U. P.	100%

INDIVIDUALS
Am. Can.	51%
Both. St.	50%
Can. Lthr.	49%
Can. St.	48%
Gen. St.	171
P. B. Car	55%
U. S. St.	11%
Whitman	115%
Wyllie-Overland	100

Advertise in The Progress.

THE CLEARFIELD PROGRESS

Published every day except Sunday by the Progressive Publishing Company, Opera House Building, Clearfield, Pennsylvania.

LEONARD B. BROOKS, Managing Editor

OFFICERS

ROBERT H. SOMMERVILLE, President JAMES H. MINDS, Vice-President
E. W. HESS, Secretary & Treasurer

DIRECTORS

ROBERT H. SOMMERVILLE JOHN W. BARRATT E. W. HESS
JAMES H. MINDS A. S. MOULTROP HARRY A. REED

H. & C. Phone Number 174 Red Phone Number 4

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One Year $2.00 Six Months $1.00
One Month .15 One Month .15

Entered at the Post Office at Clearfield, Pennsylvania, as second class mail matter

CIRCULATION STATEMENT

Average Daily Circulation (January 1, 1915, to May 31, 1915) 2465

ANALYSIS

Portion of the paper carried by R. T. D.	1264
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	659
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	62
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	82
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	2207
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	253
Portion of the paper carried by J. H. D.	2465

The Clearfield Progress is now a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, whose reports govern the circulation of newspapers in this country. The report will be published.

TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 24, 1915

CONTRABAND COTTON NOT NEW

A proposal of the A. B. C. to place cotton on the list of contraband goods is based on the fact that cotton is now an indispensable material for the manufacture of armaments. It has been treated by some writers as a new contraband, but in 1905, when at war with Japan, the United States government extended its list of contraband to include cotton on the ground that it was employed in the manufacture of explosives. It was contended that cotton for this purpose could not be distinguished from cotton for ordinary purposes and that prohibition was necessary to prohibit its importation after war.

It is interesting to note that Russia took this action against the proposal to place cotton on the list of contraband goods. The latter being interested in the export of cotton to Japan. The quantity of raw cotton imported by the British ambassador at St. Petersburg, which was utilized for explosives would be infinitesimal in comparison with the bulk of the cotton exported from Russia to Japan for peaceful purposes and to treat human cargoes of this latter description as unconditionally contraband would be to subject a branch of innocent commerce, which is specially important in the Far East, to a most unwarrantable interference.

If England could so contend in 1905, the United States can offer similar objections now, holding that the amount of American cotton utilized for explosives is very small compared with the bulk of the exported staple and that to treat all shipments as unconditional contraband would subject innocent commerce built upon the world's needs in times of peace to unwarrantable interference. Russia can now consistently declare cotton contraband, but England, in order to justify her course, must show that the employment of the staple in the manufacture of explosives has enormously increased since 1905—and indeed this may be true enough. Doubtless our state department's attitude toward this view of the matter will depend on the practicability of the measures proposed by England to protect American cotton interests from serious injury.

In any case the fact that the world accepted Russia's device making cotton contraband in 1905 apparently settles the question of the legality of such a procedure on the part of the Allies now. What has been done once can be done again. Now that cotton is extensively used in the manufacture of explosives, it would seem to have acquired the contraband character belonging to other articles employed in the production of munitions, and that in taking the proposed action the Allies would exercise a right immemorially claimed by warring nations.

'CONSCIENCE' AND THE LYNCHERS

In the opinion of ex-Governor Slaton, of Georgia, the lynchers of Leo M. Frank were "the scum and raffia of the state." The scum and raffia of a state are found in the slums of the towns and among the most ignorant and shiftless elements of the rural districts. Such people are not usually in command of automobiles. Nor would they be likely to entertain the sentiment demanding that Frank be lynched near the grave of Mary Prager, nor be inclined to take the risks of transporting their victim more than a hundred miles. The whole account suggested the work of young "dare-devils" belonging to at least fairly prosperous families, and when Governor Harris proceeds to "see to it that the members of the mob receive fitting punishment for their crime," he would do well to instruct his detectives to look a little higher than the "scum and raffia" and bring under their searching observation the young men of Marietta and perhaps even of Atlanta.

The Macon, Ga., Telegraph, which stood firmly for law and order during many years previous to its passing into entirely new hands last fall, is quoted as saying that the lynchers of Frank "went ahead with clear consciences." This betrays ignorance of the fact that conscience is developed through the effort to do the right and shun the wrong. With the average inherently savage young "dare-devil" conscience is as yet non-existent, or its burden is so light that he becomes aware of it only at the rarest intervals.

THOMAS EDISON ONLY SLEEPS TWO HOURS A DAY— UNLESS IT HAPPENS TO BE AN EXTRA INNING GAME !!!

RADIO RUOLPH SAYS—

IF YOU CAN'T AFFORD A JOY RIDE HOW ABOUT A JOY WALK?

ANGER IN THE CITY

THE LIST OF THE CITY

THE LIST OF THE CITY

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—"Built around the deep pocket of the Kiel Foe, a narrow arm of the Baltic Sea that cuts its way back into the province of Holstein, the old city of Kiel lies well-shielded from all hostile attack and centrally placed for the use of the fleet, either upon the open ocean or upon the inland sea," begins a bulletin just prepared by the National Geographic Society.

"This ancient port city is headquarters for German sea strength, the first naval station of the Empire, the point from which the orders have been issued directing the unequal duel between the ships of the Kaiser and the fleets of Britain.

"The great war-harbor of Kiel is one of the finest and most powerfully protected harbors in the world. The sea-arm whose base is enclosed by the port, has a narrow entrance and a long, irregular surface. The entrance and the strategic points along the bank are heavily fortified. Fort Falkenstein and Fort Stosch guard the narrow about 3 1/2 miles above the town. Flanking the northern termination of the new Kiel suburbs, the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, a triumph of patience and engineering cuts its way into the sheltered bay. By means of this canal, Kiel is in close communication with the North Sea, and units of the Kaiser's navy can be transferred rapidly and safely from the war theatre of the open ocean to that of the Baltic.

"The Kaiser Wilhelm Canal or the Baltic ship canal is the product of an idea which ripened through centuries. Projects for connecting the Baltic and North Seas by a water route through the Northern peninsula which should avoid the dangerous voyage around Jutland were considered spasmodically from 1300 on, but it remained to the military necessities of a great empire to bring about the realization of this advantageous waterway for trade. Any number of haphazard beginnings of the projected way were made before the construction of the present canal was undertaken by the first German Emperor, Kaiser Wilhelm I laid the foundation stone of the canal in 1887, and the costly avenue was formally declared open by the present Emperor in 1895. The original canal has been extensively improved.

"The canal crosses the peninsula, from Holtenau just beyond the northern suburbs of Kiel to Brunsbüttel at the mouth of the Elbe, at sea level, the locks at either end merely serving to neutralize the tides. It is 60 miles long, with a depth of more than 30 feet and a width sufficient to pass the largest men-of-war. A steamer takes between 8 and 9 hours to pass through the canal, thus bringing the advance German naval base at Heligoland within easy reach of the Kiel headquarters. The whole way at night is lighted by electricity. The first cost of the Baltic Ship Canal was $30,000,000. Other millions have been expended in its improvement. Regular steamer excursion service was maintained here before the war, but the voyage offered little interest besides steep banks and here and there spiritless scenery.

"Great Imperial docks, arsenals and navy yards are located at Kiel, as are also Admiralty headquarters and the Imperial Naval Academy. Foreigners were not admitted to the docks and yards. Many thousands of visitors regularly attended Kiel Week (Kiel Week), the great German regatta held each year during the latter part of June. This regatta was an event of first importance in the world of international sport, and yachts from all nations interested in water sports were usually entered in its famous races. The Yacht Hohenzoellern, housing the Emperor and the Imperial family builded each year the central point of the gay, rich, cosmopolitan throng of sportsmen.

Kiel is one of oldest towns in Holstein. Older parts are badly built, having twisting, narrow, indifferently paved streets and being flanked by gaunt, time-tortured buildings. The new town, however, is filled with handsome structures, and is well-planned. The city has grown in every way industrially, commercially, socially artistically since becoming naval headquarters for the Empire and of the greatest sport event upon the German sport calendar."

CLOTHES PARADE AT BAR HARBOR

(By United Press)

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 24.—Summer society folk gave a benefit for summering city folk today. It took the form of a fashion show at the Swimming Club new models in summer and fall wear being displayed by matrons and debutantes.

Safe Milk for Infants and Invalids

HORLICK'S

THE ORIGINAL Malted Milk

The Food-Drink for all Ages

Rich milk, malted grain, in powder form. For infants, invalids and growing children. Pure nutrition, upbuilding for the whole body. Invigorates nursing mothers and the aged. More healthful than tea or coffee.

Unless you say "HORLICK'S" you may get a substitute.

ALL STYLES KLAXON MADE HORNS.

Size	Federal	Casings	Tubes
30x8	$9.35	$10.75	$2.35
30x8 1/2	12.15	13.95	2.70
32x8 1/2	13.95	16.05	2.80
33x4	19.90	22.90	2.90
34x4 1/2	27.05	31.10	5.00
35x4 1/2	28.25	32.50	5.10
36x4	21.65	24.90	4.20
36x4 1/2	28.70	33.00	5.20

TWO STYLES HAND HORNS:

Hand Klaxon, $7.50 Hand Klaxonet, $1

LEE GARAGE CO.

Distributors

Garage, Locust Street

Clearfield, Pa.

REPORT PORTRAYS MANY DEPLORABLE LABOR CONDITIONS

Immigration Stopped Because Foreigners Are Better Off at Home—Low Wages Cause

Spy-system, Blacklists and Other Resources of Big Telegraph Companies to Prevent Spread of Unionism Among Their Employees are Cited Examples.

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—Living and working conditions in industrial America are vividly portrayed and corrective legislation is recommended in the second section of the report of Basil M. Manly, to the United States Commission on Industrial Relations.

The report, which was made public by the Commission in part yesterday was continued today and will be finally put before the people in publication of the third installment on Thursday, was prepared by Manly after exhaustive investigation into every phase of industrial relations by special committee which he headed.

That section released for public enlightenment today says frankly that labor conditions and conditions of labor in the United States are deplorable. Comparisons presented from time to time to show that the working people of this country are better off than those of Europe are misleading, the report declares. And evidence is given to prove that the laboring classes in all European countries save Russia, Austria and a few others termed "backward" practically stopped immigrating before the outbreak of the Great War for no other reason than that they could not better their conditions by coming to the United States.

The report finds that the current industrial unrest is caused largely by the payment of wages too low to provide a decent standard of living, and contends that this is in great measure due to the strangling of strong labor organizations by capitalistic combinations.

The spy-system, blacklists and other resources of the big telegraph companies to prevent spread of unionism among their employees are cited examples. The Western Union Telegraph, the Pullman Company, the railroads many big mining concerns and industrial plants have been proven strongly opposed to organization of their employees, the report holds and have dealt labor many hard and unjust blows to discourage it in getting a square deal.

Declaring that only present conditions are pertinent the findings of the committee were that:

Labor is grossly underpaid and should be protected in legitimate organizing to better its conditions; that safety and sanitation measures should be enforced; that hours should be fixed by public service and industrial concerns with an eye to the welfare of the workers as much as to gaining maximum time of service or maximum production for the wages expended; housing conditions should be greatly improved and a standard established.

The report also finds that women and children are exploited in industry, trade domestic service and agriculture to an extent that threatens their welfare and health and the well-being of future generations and that, "their competition with men is a direct menace to the wage and salary standards of men."

Woman Suffrage is held out as one of the things that should be nationally legalized as a means of overcoming that condition.

In many of those industrial communities owned by a corporation or individual a state of feudalism exists. Except that the employer recognizes no specific duty upon his part. The employees are dependent upon the employer for wages, homes and places to purchase life's necessities, with the result that the employer dictates the social and political life of such a community and the "fundamental rights of the citizens are, as a general rule, seriously abridged if not actually denied.

In Colorado such employers have even assumed to refuse to permit the issuance of money orders and the delivery of mail to employees.

The workers are most pitifully subjugated in the turpentine and lumber camps however.

In agriculture the growth of farm tenancy is menacing in that it shows that rapidly agriculture seems to be falling into the hands of the few, that the wages paid farmers are low when the profits of the owners are taken into account.

In the south and southwest particularly it has been found that the landowners are continually demanding more and more of the product from their holdings farmed by "share tenants" who furnish seed, tools and teams and then pay to the landlord one-third of the grain or cotton. Many landowners are no longer satisfied with the third, which afforded the farmer of a small parcel of land but a bare living, and there is constantly demand for an increase of the land lords share.

SEALED BIDS

Sealed proposals will be received by the School Board of the Borough of Clearfield until Friday August 27th 1915 at six (6) o'clock p. m. at the office of the Secretary of the board at Clearfield, Pa., for the excavating, furnishing materials and constructing the concrete walls, floors, footings, etc for the High School building on the corner of arket and First streets in the Borough of Clearfield, Pa.

All work and materials used to comply with the requirements of the plans and specifications, which can be seen in the office of the Secretary of the Board or a copy thereof obtained by applying to the architects, Messrs. Harrington and Howard DuBois, Pa.

Each bid to be accompanied with a certified check made payable to the School Board in an amount equal to ten (10) per cent. of the amount of the bid. The successful bidder will be required to furnish a surety bond to be approved by the board.

All certified checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned as soon as the contract is awarded; and to the successful bidder as soon as the contract is signed up and the required bond furnished to the board. The board reserves the right to reject all bids.

A. D. REGLER,

A. G. KRASER, Secretary

CANADIAN RACE MEET COMING (By United Press)

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—A six day meet of the Comaught Park Jockey Club opened today.

A Concrete Garage Ends Fire Dangers

The floor of a concrete garage cannot become covered with oil and the walls cannot burn. Your valuable automobiles will be protected in an everlasting concrete building. We advise you to use only for all concrete work. Our customers have found that it is easy to do good work with ALPHA because it has exceptional binding-power. We guarantee ALPHA to more than meet all standard tests.

ALPHA PORTLAND CEMENT

ALPHA goes further than cheaper cements, because every cubic foot is true and solid. It is made in every batch while it is being made, and gains its strength and purity.

We will tell you how to use ALPHA to secure the best results.

CLEARFIELD HARDWARE CO. CLEARFIELD, PENNA.

Banking By Mail

You know your bonds, insurance policies and other valuable papers are safe, if they are in one of our safe deposit boxes.

Our burglar proof, chrome and bessemer steel lined vault contains boxes of various sizes, which are provided for the use of depositors without charge.

Absolutely privacy is assured, for your key is the only one that will open your box.

You are invited to use County National Bank Service.

The County National Bank of Clearfield, Pa.

The Best Form of Investment

is a savings account in an institution like this, where you not only get "your money back," but with it the accumulation of three per cent. interest, which we compound semi-annually.

The longer you leave it with us the longer you'll like it in the end, the more you'll appreciate the advantage of letting your money work for you as hard as you worked for it. Fuller information on request.

CLEARFIELD TRUST COMPANY

"CLEARFIELD'S PIONEER SAVINGS BANK"

Twenty-Three Years

is a long time for any concern to do business in a city and when the concern happens to be a bank like this, with a multitude of depositors to please, there must be something about it which holds depositors together.

We think its the Courtesy, Security and Friendly Feeling extended to large and small depositors alike. At any rate you are invited to participate in it.

The Clearfield National Bank, "The Bank of Service"

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure
By EMERSON HOUGH
From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1914, by Wright A. Patterson)

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a shop half of a broken coin, the missing inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the printing office of Grahoffen, to place on the press a story about the coin. She is arrested, and on arrival in Grahoffen's apartment while chasing the secret of the broken coin begins.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XXIX.

King Cortislaw.
"So you find it convenient to enter my room once more unasked?" Kitty's eyes flashed in genuine indignation as she faced Count Sachio.
"It is not my room, mademoiselle, but ours. We pay for it and have control of it."
"There was some definite purpose in my coming here away from my friends?"
"Assuredly, a purpose very definite, and one from which we do not intend to be swerved, mademoiselle."
"What then do you purpose doing with me?"
"We plan taking you before the king, not the king of Grahoffen, but King Cortislaw of Grahoffen. We wish to see you, mademoiselle."
Kitty turned back into the room and Sachio, irritated at the delay, went so far as to take her by the arm to induce her to leave the room with him. She resisted him so vigorously that for the time he stood back nonplussed.

But at length the girl's powers proved so match for those brought against her. She was forced from the room toward the front of the building.
Once more Kitty adopted the policy of Rolaui himself—she ceased to struggle when she found struggling useless, and lay back to wait until a hand when resistance might be more effective.
"Very well, then, gentlemen," said she. "Do as you like. I am weaker than yourselves. Since you are men and gentlemen, naturally you are strong."

Count Sachio made no answer to her letting words. In truth, matters had not gone so well with him as he would have liked. He had been ordered to report to his own king, and now must make that report, and certainly would not tell of the unequalled success which he had so confidently boasted.

The insignificant distance which separated these two kingdoms was spanned in hours, somewhat to the wonderment of Kitty, schooled in the great distances of her own country.

Kitty Tries to Make Friends With the Old Keeper.

—and in the capital of Grahoffen, a allowed small time to arrange a plot or compose herself after the fatigue of the journey. Very presently she was brought before King Cortislaw himself.
She found him an old man, thin, wrinkled, crabbed, irritable, excitable. Cortislaw regarded the young girl steadily as she stood before him.
"So this is the woman?" he demanded of Count Sachio, who stood humbly by.

"The same, your majesty. She can explain what you desire to know."
The king looked intently at something he held in his hand. Kitty caught sight of it—it was the half coin which she had once possessed, which had been taken from her but lately by these men. Evidently Count Sachio had turned it over forthwith to his royal possessor.
"Mademoiselle," said he, "tell me what it says. The inscription is broken. I wish to know it all. I am informed that you have seen both halves of the coin and therefore know the entire message. Read it to me at once."
Kitty took the coin in her hand as though to study it, but swiftly hid her own hand behind her back as she clutched it.
"It is my property," said she stoutly. "Not even a king can take away my property without cause of law."

"By whom, Count Frederick?"
"Well, she has seemed curious herself regarding the coin. Perhaps she knew somewhat of it."
"So she also has studied this trinket that we gave her? Very well—we meant it to prove of interest."
"Doubtless. But regarding the coin so many threats have been made—"

"Threats? What threats? What do you know of any?"
"Many things come to my ears, your majesty, but I strive to keep them from your own ears so much as may be when I find them unwelcome."

"The most unwelcome thing that could come to us, my dear Frederick, is the absence of this young woman now. Where, think you, she may be?"
"I could not guess, unless perhaps she may have returned to her own country—in which case we shall never see her again, your majesty. We can make examination of the passenger lists of all sailings within the last two weeks. I will look into that. If she has not gone back to her own country, she either remains in this somewhere, or in some other near by."

"You do not mean Grahoffen?"
Count Frederick nodded. "That is what I do mean. In truth, your majesty, there are Grahoffen spies in this city—they were even at your ball. Perhaps they concern themselves with this young lady. Why not? If they suspect that she had part of the coin—and it was easily seen by any that once she did have that part—might they not undertake to make trouble for their own purposes with her?"
"But what good would come of that?"
Count Frederick saw that his argument had gone too far for his own purposes. He did not care to tell the king, all he knew, yet his zeal for Kitty had led him far.
"Much good might come to Grahoffen's war department, your majesty, if they knew our secrets. Perhaps they thought she could give some information."
"But you do not predict trouble between us and our neighbor—you do not mean war?"
"Your majesty, I predict nothing these days, but always it is well to be prepared."
"You disturb me sorely—do not speak to me of war—I cannot endure the thought—I do not wish to hear of it."
As it chanced, much of this conversation came to the ear of one of Sachio's agents, the spy Bartel, still hanging about the city of Grahoffen. He overheard enough in his passing by at the time of this conversation to be advised that the king of Grahoffen intended to make search for the missing American. Not hesitating he himself now sped off for his employer to communicate this news that he had learned.
He found Sachio aloof and discontented, out of favor in the court, and somewhat at a loss what next to do. At the thought of a definite demand on the part of King Michael—or rather on the part of Count Frederick—upon their kingdom for the person of the young girl, Sachio grew somewhat grave. "This," said he, "is a matter for the king."
But the king was in no too good humor over all these failures.
"What, Sachio," said he, "you come to me once more with these old woman's tales? If your time is so short before your secret is discovered, then all the more reason for diligence on your part. It is not the business of kings to accept reasons for failure in performance. The girl is still available—complete your errand with her—bring to me the reading of the coin. I know well enough that if Count Frederick comes he will be different from his king."
Therefore once more Sachio went back to his bootless interviews with Kitty, once more pleading with her to give him all knowledge she had of the coin. And once more Kitty could no more than reassure him of her own ignorance of what he wished to know.
She heard odds and ends of information which taught her which way the wind sat at Grahoffen capital. Sometimes she heard Sachio, again Bartel, again this or that man, speaking freely of the plans at hand.
"I told the king," said Bartel one time, speaking to Count Sachio, "that one is ripe for the shaking of the area. I told him that we have full plans of all their fortifications and defenses—that their resistance will be but nominal. Once we get the Grahoffen coffers opened, times will be easier in our country."
"Yes, once you get," rejoined Sachio grimly. "But tell us how!"
Kitty, really owing allegiance to neither of these kingdoms, both of which had done her such repeated injustice, hardly stopped to ask herself why she found her own leanings towards Grahoffen, the scene of most of the indignities she had met. She must escape for every reason—so she assured herself. But how?
From the windows she had a full view of the well-kept grounds of the palace and of the boulevards surrounding it. She stood alone one day staring out on scenes grown familiar to her. But all at once her gaze grew more intent, fixed upon some object not far away. A car was standing at the curb. She did not remember to have seen it there regularly.
The two giant grenadiers to whom had been assigned the duty of watching after her in her wanderings regarded her as little more than a child, and they smiled as now she pushed past them through the door which led out to the gardens. She walked out to the car which stood at the curb, regarding it curiously, as though it were the first car she had ever seen in her life—something very far from true.
What the guards, who smilingly regarded her through the windows, saw was a swift leap of the girl to the driver's seat, her rapid movements with the controlling levers as she cut on the spark, gave the car gas, threw in the clutch, threw open the throttle, and the car sped off like a shot.

Her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!
Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.
Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.
She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.
"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"
"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"
"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation. Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"
In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.
"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!
Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.
Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.
She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.
"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"
"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"
"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation. Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"
In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.
"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!
Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.
Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.
She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.
"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"
"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"
"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation. Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"
In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.
"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!
Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.
Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.
She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.
"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"
"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"
"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation. Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"
In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.
"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!
Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.
Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.
She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.
"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"
"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"
"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation. Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"
In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.
"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.
"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.
"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"
"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way—asked many questions regarding yourself, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."
Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit. Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.
He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her.
"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"
The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"
It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.
As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.
She entered softly, leaving Rolaui as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.
But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye.

Gossip for Tonight's Tea Table

Miss Grace Ross is at Philipsburg on a visit to relatives and friends.

Miss Martha Itames was over at Philipsburg from Clearfield to spend the Sabbath with her parents.

Miss Catherine Hile of Philipsburg has been spending a few days with Clearfield friends.

Miss Esther Brumbaugh, who had been visiting friends at Philipsburg and at Clearfield, has returned to her home at Jersey Shore.

David Campbell, of Philipsburg, terminated business in town yesterday.

Miss Sarah Mulgrew and brother, Joseph, have returned to DuBois after a pleasant visit with their sister, Mrs. Joseph Aelzander, of Second street.

Mrs. N. J. Fletcher, of Second street, has returned from a week's visit to Bradford, Pa.

Miss Vera Ogden is visiting friends in Salona, Pa.

Leslie A. Bartole and Banks Smith are spending their vacations with relatives and friends in Watonsville during "Old Home Week."

Miss Anna Shoff left this morning for Johnstown.

Leslie Shrago, of Williamsport, has returned home after a visit with friends in Clearfield.

Paul Shoff, of Portage, is spending his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Shoff, of Ogden avenue.

Miss Violet Hughes left this morning for her home in Williamsport after an extended visit with her uncle, E. R. Hughes, of Second street.

Miss Sarah Cummings, of New Washington, a former teacher in the Clearfield High School, is attending her sister at the hospital who is getting along nicely since her operation last Saturday.

Aaron Clark of Glen Campbell, and John Dutton, of West Market street, moved to Patchinville yesterday where they expect to visit for several days.

Miss Elizabeth Irwin and Miss Emma, of Curwensville, were shopping in town today.

Mrs. Henry Van Valsah, of Tyrone, is visiting friends and relatives in town.

Miss Jane McKelvey and Miss Ada Morris have just returned from a visit with friends in Bradford.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Wood, of Altoona, are visiting at the home of David McGarvey on Pine Street.

Robert Coxier, of La Jose, was business visitors to town today.

Marion Hess has returned to his work in E. W. Hess' office after a two weeks' vacation.

Bud Lee and Reilly Lytle attended the New Millport picnic today.

Miss Salome Davis left Monday morning for Railroad, York county, where she is employed for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Davis, U. F. Davis, and family of Grampian, and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Albert, of Woodhead, spent Sunday at the home of W. E. Davis, on Guelich avenue.

Miss Edna Fullington and Miss Orval L. Davis are attending the Sunday school convention at DuBois this week.

Mrs. Annie E. Means left on the 7:30 train Monday evening to attend the funeral of her brother Albert H. Goodwin, of Ayondale, Chester county.

P. O. S. of A. Picnic At Mineral Springs

To the members and friends of Woodland, Clearfield and Grampian camps of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. A district picnic will be held at Mineral Springs park on September 4, commencing at 10:30 o'clock. There will be amusement at the park, and a baseball game between the different camps. Speaking at 7:30 P. M. in the Pavilion.

Ice cream will be served to all members and their families at supper. Come and enjoy an evening in the open air, and get acquainted. All trains stop at the Park. Committee.

E. J. Turner,
H. B. Peters.

CLEARFIELD, ITALIAN BAND 30 PIECES SALVATORE IMPALOMENI, Leader

Open for engagements anywhere at any time. Rates Reasonable.

For terms write to THOMAS J. SPINGOLA, Manager, P. O. Box, Clearfield, Pa.

M. & C. Phone 192-2

DR. ANNA SHAW TO BE IN TOWN AUGUST 30—TOUR

Will Make Thirty Speeches In State—Tours Four States.

The most forceful and eloquent speaker of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw will speak in Clearfield on August 30 under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage Association. She will devote the week of August 30 to September 6 inclusive in this state.

Miss Shaw has volunteered this campaign to the cause as her personal contribution. She will deliver thirty speeches in each of the four states which vote on suffrage this year, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Massachusetts. She has refused to accept personal fees for any of these 120 speeches.

In the varied career of her 68 years Miss Shaw has done practical work in as many lines as three or four ordinary men or women could successfully engage in. She has been a school teacher, an ordained minister of the Gospel, a practicing physician and a suffrage lecturer and campaigner. She has spoken for the cause in every state in the Union. Her personality and eloquence are said to have done more to advance the interests of women and children than have the efforts of any other worker.

Wit and humor make her speeches as entertaining as they are effective. She is so much in demand that it has been necessary to arrange a "whirlwind" campaign of the most strenuous kind in order to permit even a small portion of the people of the state to hear her.

IN PERIL of their lives Kitty Gray and her faithful follower galloped madly through the darkness followed relentlessly by their foes. Apparently nothing can save them from capture, but once again fate favors the brave.

However, she has still a long and thrilling search before her. Many dangers lie in her path. From now on she is determined at any cost to rescue from her the fruits of her dauntless energy and cleverness.

How will it all end? The whole story is told in the thrilling picture serial THE BROKEN COIN.

Follow this great picture story through every phase of breathless, stirring adventure. Kitty Gray has literally taken the whole country by storm. Take your family every week to see this masterpiece of photo play achievement, written by the clearest of fiction writers and played by a company of brilliant Universal photo play stars.

See THE BROKEN COIN Every Week The Photo Play Serial Supreme 15 Episodes—One Each Week

New Opera House Wednesday Night

Read It In This Issue

JESS WILLARD PUTS A PUNCH IN THE ARENA OF CIRCUS

While Jess Willard, the cowboy world's champion, puts a big "punch" in the performances of Miller Bros. & Arlington's 101 Ranch Wild West show, which comes to Clearfield, Wednesday September 1, the cowgirls constitute a very important part of the company of strenuous people who give vim to the exhibition.

The cowboys are usually associated in the public mind with the liveliest and most daring portions of the Wild West program. As a matter of fact, it is declared, there is scarcely anything in the way of roughriding accomplished by the most reckless cowpunchers that is not duplicated by the girls in the show. The riskiness of the real cowgirl is proverbial, and instead of urging them to perform daredevil feats, the management, it is declared, is constantly under the necessity of cautioning them against risking their lives and limbs.

In the 101 Ranch show the cowgirls are always very much in evidence. They participate in the exhilarating and dangerous roundup of wild steers which is one of the distinctive features of the show; they ride wild steers as well as rope them; they accomplish wonderful feats in high-school horsemanship, and with it all they give a feminine touch to the performance that adds distinctly to its attractiveness.

JESS WILLARD

There are, it is announced, about fifty cowgirls with the 101 Ranch show, and their strenuous riding, their picturesque ranch attire and their around cleverness add something to the show that would be otherwise significantly missed.

The cowgirls, the cowboys, the Indians, the Mexicans, and all the other ranch people will be seen in what is said to be the most exciting performance ever seen in a Wild arena, while the appearance of Jess Willard in his role as a cowboy, and, later, in ring costume with one of his sparring partners, will give a "punch" to the performance that no other Wild West show has ever had. All the 101 Ranch notables will be seen in the free street parade that takes place at 10:30 on the morning of show day.

WANTED—A good capable man wants work as a janitor, or looking after furnaces in winter. Apply J. G. Progress office.

JOHN E. JOHNSON DUBOIS, PA. For Prothonotary

Subject to Decision of The Voters of The Republican Primary Election, September 21, 1915.

ANNUAL CONVENT'N OF GOVERNORS OF U. S. AT BOSTON

Gathering Meets This Morning—Address of Welcome by Governor of Mass

Every Convenience Arranged—Personal Aide to Every Governor and Ex-Governor, Expenses Paid, Naval Militia Ship to Take Guests on Harbor Trip.

(By United Press)

Boston, Aug. 24.—The eighth annual conference of the governors of the United States convened here today for a four days meeting. The visiting state executives were greeted with an address of welcome by Governor Walsh of Massachusetts at a reception opening the conference, which was responded to by Governor Spry of Utah. Mayor Curley of Boston also welcomed the visitors.

About 25 governors and 15 former governors attended the conference. Governor Walsh is chairman of the executive committee in charge of the conference and a committee of prominent citizens was appointed by him to assist in entertaining the visitors. He announced that he planned to combine with the business of the conference numerous social features, including mobilization of the state militia with a parade and half holiday; the furnishing of a militia officer to act as personal aide to every governor and ex-governor; the payment by the state of the expenses of the visitors; the use of a battleship or the naval militia training ship, cruiser Chicago, to take the guests on a harbor trip, and a public reception to-night at the state house.

The following program had been prepared: 10:30 a. m. Reception to visitors with address of welcome by Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley. Response by Governor Spry of Utah; 2 p. m. papers by former Governor Emmet O'Neal of Alabama, "Possibilities of the Governors' Conference" and Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado, "State or National Control of Waterpower Sites"; 4 p. m. Automobile tour of the park system; 8:00 p. m., public reception at state house.

Wednesday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor E. L. Williams of Oklahoma, "The Executive Budget," and Governor Moses Alexander of Idaho, subject to be announced; 2 p. m. papers by former Governor Cole L. Blease of South Carolina, "The Duty and Responsibility of the Governor in Dealing with Prisoners," and Governor W. S. Hammond of Minnesota, "Economy and Efficiency in the State"; 4 p. m. North Shore automobile drive including shore dinner at the Eastern Yacht Club, Marblehead.

Thursday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor H. C. Stuart of Virginia, "Taxation," former Governor John A. Dix of New York, "Conservation of Man and of Natural Resources," and former Governor William Hodges Mann of Virginia, subject to be announced; 2 p. m. papers by Governor Charles S. Whitman of New York, subject to be announced, and former Governor Bliss M. Ammons of Colorado, whose subjects was also announced 4 p. m. automobile trip to Concord and Lexington; 8 p. m. Executive session, which will select the next meeting place, elect an executive committee, secretary and treasurer.

Friday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor James F. Fielder of New Jersey, "What Should Be the State's Duty in the matter of National Defense?" and a farewell address by Secretary of War Garrison; 1:30 p. m. harbor trip with dinner and an inspection sail through the Cape Cod canal.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS There will be a meeting of the Registered Republican voters of Clearfield borough in the Arbitration room at the court house on Tuesday evening, August 24th, at 8:00 o'clock. All persons registered Republican are urged to be present.

JOHN M. BAIN, Secty. Boro. Rep. Com.

ANNA PAVLOVA The Famous Dancer

A "Hummer Story In North American Begins Thursday

A serial story constructed along entirely new lines will begin in The North American for Thursday, August 26, and be continued a chapter a day. The title of the story is "Neal of the Navy," the author is William Hamilton Osborne, one of the leading American creators of fiction. Incident after incident of the most thrilling character combine to make the story grip the attention of the reader, and motion pictures based upon these incidents will be shown in leading theaters, thus heightening the interest of the reader.

The first episode of the story—the first six instalments and his first two reels of the motion picture—are based upon the catastrophe of Mount Pelee, and so successfully have they been written and planned that they send the story off at a rattling gait. The picture of the scenes described will include many feet of real volcanic eruption, one of the most marvelous bits of action ever shown on the screen.

"Neal of the Navy" represents another departure. Never before has a writer of the standing of Mr. Osborne written an original story with the purpose of having it screened. It marks a new departure and a new class of motion-picture play.

FAKE MAGAZINE AGENT CAUGHT IN DUBOIS As a Side Line Carried on Business of Misleading Girls

A young swindler by the name of H. J. Obershaw, together with two girls, has been doing the people of DuBois, Punxsutawney and surrounding towns out of considerable money by soliciting subscriptions for various magazines.

The fraud was discovered last week and the man, together with the girls, one of whom he called his wife, was arrested and given a hearing. He was fined and told to get out of town. The charges were not pressed seriously because of the absence of the persons who had been swindled and the representative of the company who had discovered the fraud.

A side line of his business was evidently that of misleading young girls as he had made efforts to get some of the girls about DuBois to work for him offering them great inducements and telling them how easy it was to make money.

COUNTY S.S. ASS'N. MEETS AT MT. ZION

Delegates From All Sunday Schools Expected at DuBois Today

The Clearfield County Sabbath school association in the forty-first annual convention of that association will assemble at the Mt. Zion M. E. church, DuBois, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Delegates from nearly all the Sunday schools in this district will be represented. Ministers or the county, district secretaries will also be in attendance.

The meeting will be presided over by H. A. Reed, county president. The program for the day follows:

2:00 Devotions, led by Dr. C. W. Miner, DuBois.

2:30 President's period, H. A. Reed, Mahaffey.

2:50 Open discussion on the subjects: "A New Record in Church Accessions and How It Was Made."

3:20 "The Sunday School of the Open Country," Rev. O. B. Poulson, Wallacetown.

4:00 Church federation period. Appointment of committees.

This Evening.

7:00 Song service.

8:00 "The Sunday School on the Foreign Field," Rev. E. D. Parkhill, Curwensville.

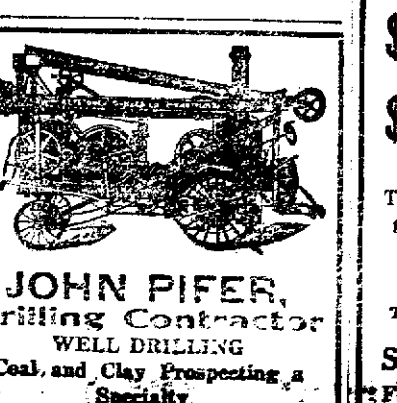

8:30 "Safety First," General Secretary, W. G. Landes, Philadelphia.

Announcement and benediction.

CHILDREN IN NEED OF CLOTHING FOR SCHOOL

The Children's Aid society, having a number of children who they are preparing to send to school are in need of suitable clothing, especially boys clothing to fit the youngsters out properly.

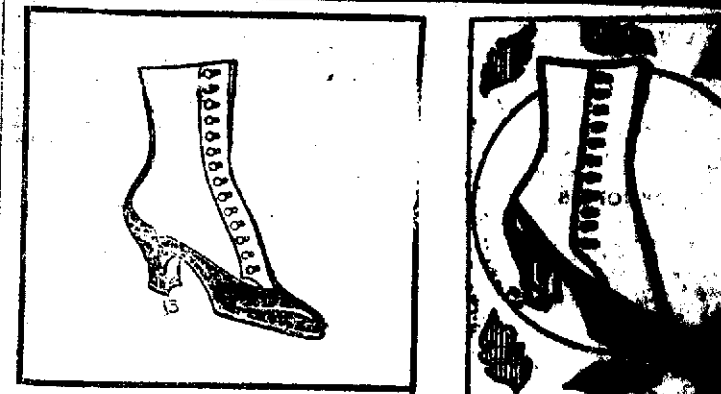

They have in their boarding home 15 children ranging in ages from two years to fourteen years. Any donations will be greatly appreciated and can be sent either to the home or to any of the following ladies: Mrs. W. O. Wilson, chairman of the society, Mrs. W. I. Swoope, Mrs. A. E. Leitzinger or Mrs. Fred Betts.

JOHN PIFER, Drilling Contractor WELL DRILLING Coal and Clay Prospecting a Specialty CURWENSVILLE, PA.

Fall Shoe Styles

We are now showing the late Fall styles for Men and Women. Everything new in Shoes.

School Shoes for Children in all styles and prices, lots of bargains.

We still have a lot of Men's $4.00, $3.00 and Shoes in good style at

A lot of Men's $3.00 Shoes for work and dress.

A lot of Women's $3.00 Dress Shoes in patent dull leathers now

Brown's Boot Shoe

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Prothonotary We are authorized to announce JOHN H. MOORE, of Clearfield, as a candidate for prothonotary, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-11-15

Register and Recorder We are authorized to announce ED. B. CHASE, of Clearfield, as a candidate for Register and Recorder, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-10-15.

Register and Recorder We are authorized to announce TONE EVANS, of DuBois, as a candidate for Register and Recorder, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-7-15.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce OLIVER S. McCLOSKEY, of Curwensville, as a candidate for County Commissioner, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 4-1-15.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER We are authorized to announce WM. M. TEMPLETON as a candidate for County Commissioner, of Lawrence township, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. P. O. Address, Hyde, Pa.

PROTHONOTARY We are authorized to announce JAMES M. GALLAHER, of Clearfield, as a candidate for Prothonotary subject to the rules of the Republican primary election.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce HARRY L. JONES, of Kylertown, as a candidate for County Commissioner subject to the rules of the Republican primary election—s. o. d.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce H. H. SPENCER, of DuBois, as a candidate for County Commissioner, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election.

CLASSIFIED

EMPLOYMENT WANTED WANTED—Nursing to do by the week. Inquire 215 West Ave. Aug. 16 15.

WANTED—Position doing house work. Have had good experience and training. Elizabeth 615 Merril St.

WANTED—Position in office clerk by young man 17 years. Have completed three years school course. Address care of Progress office.

HELP WANTED WANTED—Competent man Apply at Progress.

WANTED—Young lady for fountain. Apply Deasy & Co. 8-23 15.

FOR SALE—A team of mules, wagon and complete outfit. Apply Frank Spingola, 14th and street. A 25-25 p.

FOR SALE—A horse eight old, good driver and would do a good work horse. Inquire Cleaver, Curwensville. Aug. 15, 15.

FOR RENT—Two furnished rooms suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

FOR RENT—Two furnished rooms suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

FOR RENT—Two furnished rooms suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

FOR RENT—Two furnished rooms suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD SIXTEEN-DAY EXCURSIONS September 2, 1915

$ 8.00 or Atlantic City, Cape May
$10.00 to Wildwood, Wildwood Crest, Aspley, Holly Beach,
$10.00 to Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Avalon, Stone Harbor, N. J.
$12.00 to Rehoboth, Del., and Ocean City, Md.

Asbury Park, Long Branch
West End, Hollywood, Elberon, Deal Beach, Absecon,
North Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Bradley Beach,
Avon, Belmar, Como, Spring Lake, Sea Girt, Eatonsville,
Point Pleasant, Manasquan, and Bay Head, N. J.
From Clearfield

Tickets at the lower fare good only in Coaches. Tickets at the higher fare good in Parlor or Sleeping Cars in connection with proper Pullman tickets.

Special Daylight Train of Parlor Cars and Coaches Through to Atlantic City

Tickets good for passage on Special Train or on train leaving Pittsburgh at 4:35 P. M., 8:30 P. M., Coaches only, and 8:50 P. M., Sleeping Cars only, and their connections.

Stop-Over at Philadelphia and Harrisburg Returning

For leaving times of Special and regular trains, stop-over privileges and full information, consult nearest Ticket Agent, or E. Yungman, District Passenger Agent, Room 215 Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bernstorff Thinks Wilson Should Wait Advice of Germany

Denial of Responsibility for Sinking of Arabic Expected in Washington When Germany Speaks

BERLIN TO AWAIT REPORT OF SUBMARINE

WASHINGTON, August 24.—FURTHER THAN AN UNOFFICIAL SUGGESTION FROM COUNT VON BERNSTORFF, GERMAN AMBASSADOR, THAT THE UNITED STATES TAKE NO ACTION IN THE ARABIC CASE UNTIL THE OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT HAD BEEN RECEIVED, THE ARABIC SITUATION REMAINED UNCHANGED TODAY. PRESIDENT WILSON IS DISINCLINED TO GO FURTHER THAN DIRECT AMBASSADOR GIRARD TO INQUIRE AT THE GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE IF A REPORT FROM THE SUBMARINE COMMANDER SUPPOSED TO BE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SINKING OF THE ARABIC. THIS ACTION HAS BEEN TAKEN, BUT NO REPLY HAS YET BEEN RECEIVED FROM BERLIN.

Because of the distance the submarines operate from their base, and satisfactory means of communication with them, it is not believed that an official report of the Arabic outrage will be received in Berlin within a fortnight.

In the meantime state department officials and President Wilson's personal aides at the white house are gathering every possible bit of information for the President's consideration when the time for action comes. There seems to be a general disposition to await Germany's explanation of the incident, with the full expectation that some form of a denial of responsibility for the loss of the Arabic will follow.

New York, August 24.—Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, this afternoon issued the following statement on the Arabic case:

"The United States government should hold up any action regarding the Arabic incident until an official statement can be received from the German government."

CLEARFIELD BOY IN GOLD MEDAL CONTEST AT OSCEOLA

One of the items of particular interest in the Clearfield county W. C. T. U. convention at Osceola Mills September 2 and 3, is a Gold Medal Contest. On Thursday evening, September 2, the following young people will compete for a gold medal: Elizabeth Donaldson, DuBois; Marion Bowes, Osceola Mills; Margaret Crawford, DuBois; Ruth Twigg, Curwensville; Gerie Johnston, Clearfield; Lucille Dunn, DuBois; and Grace Lydie, Mahaffey. Many of the best speakers in the county have competed for and won other medals. But two gold medals have been awarded. Both were won by sisters, Misses Ruth and Florence Garath, of Mahaffey, the first being awarded at DuBois, the second at Westover.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE

"T See Ourselves As Others See Us"
A Unique Story From R. F. D.
No. 2

A young man of "these parts" started to go with a young lady, and many tongues were wagging about the "match", when the wedding would be, when suddenly he quit going with her.

A friend asked him why he got "cold feet" and he replied: "I read in a paper of a factory in Massachusetts that makes 20,000 rolling pins every day."

TODAY'S REPORTS FROM BERLIN BY UNITED PRESS

(By United Press)
Berlin, August 24.—General Macdonald's troops have stormed and captured Kopytov on the southwest front of the Brest-Litovsk line.

A German submarine has torpedoed and sunk a Russian auxiliary ship off the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. It was officially announced this afternoon. Presumably the ship is one of those at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

Russia is facing bankruptcy and is unable to fill the ranks and put an army of 8,000,000 to the front according to newspapers. The papers state there is to be a second meeting of the financial committee of the Russian Imperial council.

RUSSIA RESPONSIBLE

(By United Press)
Berlin, August 24.—That Russia was largely responsible for the last Balkan war, is now the statement printed in the North German Gazette.

Subscribe for The Progress.

FIFTH REGIMENT BAND TO GIVE CONCERT THURSDAY

Special Occasion Will Bring Out Full Attendance of the Band

Another of the excellent concerts of Leopold's Fifth Regiment band is to be given Thursday night, the occasion being a special one because of the gathering of the full band preparatory to the trip to Philipsburg Friday with the Clearfield Fire department. Director Leopold promises a complete new program, which will include but one of the number played at the concert two weeks ago. This will be a medley which is to be rendered by special request.

A full program of the concert will be published in the newspapers tomorrow. As usual the concert will start at eight o'clock, and will last for more than an hour. The bandstand will be erected at the court house corner and a large attendance is expected.

PLAYGROUND BENEFIT IS ATTRACTING MUCH NOTICE

Kids Sell Many Tickets to Entertainment at Globe Thursday Evening

The youngsters who are selling tickets for the benefit to be given at the Globe theatre Thursday evening are meeting with gratifying success. Several hundred tickets have already been disposed of, and it is expected that fully a thousand will attend the splendid show that has been booked by Manager Driggs.

The benefit is being held under the auspices of the Women's club, and is to raise funds for the playground movement. The season will soon close and the club faces a deficit in its budget for playground work, which it is hoped to raise in the receipts from the show.

PHILIPSBURG LADIES ATTEND A LUNCHEON

Mrs. H. B. Douglas of Clearfield formerly of Philipsburg, entertained a party of ladies on Saturday at a beautiful appointed luncheon in honor of Mrs. Williams of Carnegie, who with her family, is occupying the Hale home on Prospective street.

COMMITTEE MEETING

The advertising committee of the Automobile tour will meet in the Arbitration room of the court house tonight at 8:00 sharp. The chairman of the other committees for the tour have been invited to attend for the purpose of exchanging ideas and formulate a slogan for the campaign.

BUFFET LUNCH

There will be a buffet lunch given this evening at the residence of Mrs. Josephine Williams for the benefit of the A. M. E. church. All are welcome. Lunch 10 cents

MEETING OF WHIST CLUB

The Hospital Bridge Whist Club will meet with Mrs. F. B. Irwin, Wednesday afternoon August 25 at two o'clock.

GENERAL WOOD WATCHING BUSINESS MEN TRAINING TO BE SOLDIERS

Plattsburg, New York.—An unusual photograph of Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the department of the east, U. S. A., watching from behind a fence, the business men who are in the military training camp here, rapidly becoming capable soldiers and defenders of their country. In a talk to the men who are encamped here he said in part: "As 'As Thomas Jefferson said to Monroe: 'We must train and organize all our male citizens and make military instruction compulsory in our colleges. Until we do, we will not be safe. That is true today. WE MUST HAVE A SYSTEM OF TRAINED CITIZEN SOLDIERY SIMILAR TO THAT OF SWITZERLAND AND AUSTRALIA.' A standing army of 60,000 men for our insular possessions and one of 175,000 for duty in this country was needed."

BERRY PICKER IS FINDER OF CASTLY REMAINS IN WOODS

Young Boy Finds Skeleton Of Suicide In Bushes Near Philipsburg

Investigation of District Attorney Reveals Identity of Man As One Deceased Who Lived at Morrisdale and Disappeared a Month Ago.

A small Morrisdale boy stumbled on a horrible find yesterday while picking berries near that town when he uncovered the decomposed body of Andrew Lepvar, a miner, who had been missing from his home in Morrisdale for a month.

Every indication pointed to suicide. When Coroner J. J. Polium and District Attorney Walter Welch arrived on the scene this morning the first thing they found was a leather belt with a noose in it hanging in a tree beneath which the body was found. The skull of the corpse detached from the body, the picture was readily drawn of the dead man hanging himself from the tree with his own belt. The body remained exposed to the elements for a month, during which decomposition rendered it practically a skeleton. Its weight wrenched the head from the body.

The District Attorney's investigation resulted in establishing the identity of the skeleton. It proved to be Andrew Lepvar who disappeared from his home in Morrisdale Mines about a month ago. He had been sick for over a year and had become demented. Once before he tried to end his life by hanging.

Paul McGuire, the fourteen year old son of Paul McGuire Sr., of Morrisdale, who was out picking berries yesterday morning in company with several other lads made the ghastly find in a thicket above the old Lepvar mine, now being operated by H. B. Bios.

Members of the state Constabulary were soon on the spot but allowed no one to touch the remains until District Attorney Welch's appearance.

Subscribe for The Progress.

MOTORCYCLE CRASH AT BREWERY DEATH CURVE YESTERDAY

Clyde Murray Smashes Into Thomas Langsford and Is Badly Cut

Motorcycle Thrown Several Yards by Impact With Automobile—Lands on Top of Young Man—Legs and Ankles Injured.

Another chapter was added to the history of Clearfield's motor accidents when Clyde Murray, riding a motorcycle, and Thomas Langsford, of Surveyor Run, driving an automobile, came together in a head-on collision at the worst death trap in Clearfield county, the Brewery Hill curve.

Langsford was coming up the hill and Murray, returning home from his work, was coming down. The crash came at the center of the curve and Murray was thrown several yards, the motorcycle falling on top of him. He was badly cut about the legs and ankles, and bruised about the body. The responsibility for the accident is about evenly divided as Murray was riding in the middle of the street, and Langsford was not paying attention to the road. Murray's machine was badly bent and twisted while the auto escaped with slight damages.

BAD GANG OF CRIMINALS DISCOVERED AT PUNXY

A band of youthful criminals, thoroughly organized and bound together by the death tie, was unearthed at Punxsutawney yesterday by the police who have been mystified by a number of robberies which this juvenile band committed.

Their crimes run from petty thieving to highway robbery. The last offense committed was that of highway robbery, when they led two drunks to an out of the way place and then slugged them with a "billy" and went through their pockets.

Five of the band have been apprehended and will not tell the names of the remainder saying that their comrades would kill them if they told. This fact convinces the police that the band is thoroughly organized.

EVENTS IN THE WAR ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

- Germans renew offensive in North France, but Paris reports French, English, and Belgians are holding them in check. German report is that 10,000 French have been taken prisoners and Longwy captured.
- Belgium denies Namur has fallen, saying blowing up of one fort caused report.
- Zeppelin drops bombs on Antwerp, killing seven, and is brought down by artillery fire near city.
- Invading Russian army defeated by Germans at Stollupnen, cavalry contributing to German success.
- Russia reports two great armies advancing over 70-mile front into East Prussia.
- Premier Asquith tells Parliament that the war probably will strain empire's resources and entail sacrifices.
- Three thousand Russians leave Vladivostok to join in attack of Japanese on Tsing-Tao.
- Servia announces clearing of her soil of Austrian troops by battle at Sabac.
- Premier Salandra assures Italian deputies that mobilization is not imminent.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS WILL PICNIC AT PARK

The Knights of Columbus will hold an outing and basket picnic at the Clearfield driving park tomorrow in which the Clearfield Council No. 409 will participate.

An excellent program has been arranged which will provide amusement for all the people attending. There are races, dashes, jumps, etc. which are arranged for the married men, single men, boys, girls and ladies. There will also be dancing on the pavilion.

A free bus will leave the K. of C. rooms for the park at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. and returning will leave the park at 6 to 8 p. m.

RESERVE YOUR PLACES

All those wishing reservation for supper at the Country club this week should communicate with Mrs. B. D. Swoope, at Curwensville.

ENGLAND KNOWS FRANCE IS NOT SATISFIED WITH HER

Admit With Sincere Regret That France Has Some Ground for Complaint

London Being Fortified, Strikes Have Been Remedied—Britain Expects to Stop the French Discontent in Near Future.

Note:—The following article is in reply to that of William Philip Simms Paris correspondent of the United Press, in which France's dissatisfaction with England's efforts as an ally was told. Simms sent a copy of his article to Keen in London.

BY ED. L. KEEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 11 (My mail) England knows France is not satisfied with her. The showing Great Britain has made with her land forces has not all that France has had a right to expect.

While the despatch from William Philip Simms, the United Press correspondent in Paris probably reveals to America for the first time the extent of the French discontent, it relates facts which are well known to Britons.

Britons admit, with sincere regret that France has had some ground for her complaints. But they predict that in the very near future the allies will have no basis for criticism.

Britons do not deny the French charge contained in Simms' article, that the Britons are fortifying London with a double row of defense. The Britons are looking square in the face the remote possibility that the British Isles may be invaded by Germany. London has been preparing for invasion for a long time. Great Britain will do her best to keep the possible invaders away from Calais and the French criticism that the British are thoughtlessly worrying more about London than they are about Calais is not well received in London. Calais may be on French soil but the British realize that it is the German gateway to London and

Boston Co. Will Not Do Business In State of Georgia

Does Not Want to Sell Atlanta Or Of Its Citizens Until State Takes Action In Frank Case

A UNIQUE PROTEST AGAINST INACTIVITY

DESPITE SINKING OF SHIPS ENGLAND ADVERTISES TRIPS

Newspapers Advertise Trips to Panama-Pacific Exposition

(By United Press)
London, Aug. 24.—A hull trawler under the command of Boyle was sunk by a German submarine today. Three of the crew were drowned and nine others were rescued. Despite the constant sinking of English vessels by German submarines, the London newspapers are advertising extensively advising no one to miss a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition. Reports from Copenhagen that Germany has apologized to Denmark for violating Danish territorial waters to fire upon a British submarine, were received today from the war office.

MUCH SPEED TO GET THE MATRIMONIAL KNOT TIED

Two young people, one from Clearfield and the other from Grampian, were in an awful rush to get married last evening at Curwensville. After rushing to the justice of the peace's office and finding him not in they made a bee line for the first preacher in sight.

They were rushed around in a jitney car from Clearfield and nearly exhausted the patience of both the driver and the machine. Finally they were married in time to catch the B. & P. train to DuBois from whence they journeyed to their happy honeymoon.

The bride is Iva Rafferty and the groom is Willard Horn. Many wishes for a happy married life follow them from their friends.

INDIANA AUTOMOBILISTS ARE COMING TO CLEARFIELD

One Hundred Machines Will Pay Visit to Town Saturday Evening

The Indiana Automobile club is planning a visit to Clearfield next Saturday evening which promises to be the biggest thing of its kind ever to happen locally. A full hundred machines, with probably three hundred passengers, will arrive here Saturday evening between five and six o'clock. Dinner has been arranged for at the Dining, and a dance is to follow to which many local society people have been asked. The party will remain in Clearfield overnight, making the return trip to Indiana Sunday morning.

"PEACE SCHEME" PLOTTED IN GERMANY—NEWSPAPERS

(By United Press)
London, August 24.—"A Big Peace Scheme," is being plotted in Germany is the headline in the Amsterdam Daily Chronicle today, to be unearthed within a fortnight if Germany's plans do not miscarry the correspondent says.

that it must be defended to England's utmost. However, if the British fall at Calais, they must be prepared to make their last stand at London.

It is true, as the French point out, that strikes have hampered the British but that defect is being remedied thanks to the efficient work and inspiring appeals of the new minister of munitions Lloyd George. Twenty-six new national arsenals have been started within the past month and 100,000 British workmen have offered their services in this connection.

Now that they know the truth of the empire's grave peril the workmen of England have decided to quit striking.

The Englishman quoted by Simms as saying that the army of 3,000,000 men in England were supplied with wooden guns, was exaggerating conditions. For the most part the men in training have rifles. It is true that thousands may be seen daily in the parks of London drilling with wooden guns but these men are Home Defense Guards, men who are unable due to physical or other disabilities, to enlist in the regular service and even they will shortly be supplied with excellent rifles.

Atlanta, August 24.—A queue of protest against the murder of M. Frank was disclosed today by officials in the publication of the Atlanta city government caulked yarn and tools.

Until the state of Georgia taken official action looking to the apprehension and punishment of men who murdered Leo M. Frank, do not care to allow the city of Atlanta or any of its citizens purchase any of our commodities," read the striking communication, which from a firm with long established business connections with the city.

BRADY TOWNSHIP ALUMNI PICNIC

The Brady Township Alumni Association of Central State Normal School, Lock Haven, held their picnic at Luthersburg, on August 22. There were fifty in attendance including alumni friends of the school.

Professor W. C. Long, of Lock Haven represented the alumni and gave a very interesting address.

The greatest function of the day occurred at one o'clock when all were called to dinner and a table spread with all kinds of dainties.

The afternoon was spent in playing various games and recalling reminiscences of days spent as "Dorm Normal." The last game of the place was a good old fashioned game of "hide and seek" after which all said farewell, hoping to return next year.

JUDGE INSTRUCTS MEN TO IMPROVE MOUNTAIN ROAD

Bad Condition of Road Leads Judges Auto Club to Protest

Complaints made by the DuBois automobile club to Judge Bell about the condition of the "Mountain Road" between Penfield and Sabals resulted in the judge notifying the supervisors to get busy and fix up the road.

The condition of the road at present is such that it is used but the "Mountain Road" is one of the most beautiful drives in the county and is greatly enjoyed by large numbers when in good condition.

Judge Bell notified the supervisors that he would do what he could to the matter and accordingly wrote the supervisors a letter about it.

FILES PETITION FOR JUDGESHIP IN OTHER COUNTY

(By United Press)
Harrisburg, August 24.—Shirley Fulton, of Fayette county, has filed nomination petitions for the judgeship in Washington county. This is the first instance where a person in the county filed nomination for the judgeship in another.

STOCK QUOTATIONS

(Quotations furnished by telegraph by Clearfield, Fulton & Cannon, 1015 Erie building, Philadelphia.)

Opening 9:30 a. m.

RAILROADS
Atchafalpa	104 1/2
B. & O.	97 1/2
Can. Pac.	140 1/2
St. Paul	68
St. M. & N. Y. C.	117 1/2
N. Y. C.	90 1/2
N. Y. C. P.	100 1/2
Penn.	100 1/2
Reading	147
U. P.	120 1/2

INDIVIDUALS

Am. Can.	51 1/2
Both. St.	27 1/2
Can. Lthr.	48 1/2
Can. St.	90 1/2
Gen. El.	171
P. B. Car.	53 1/2
U. S. St.	11 1/2
Whitman	118 1/2
Wyllie-Overland	100

Advertise in The Progress.

THE CLEARFIELD PROGRESS

Published every day except Sunday by the Progressive Publishing Company, Opera House Building, Clearfield, Pennsylvania.

LEONARD B. BROOKS, Managing Editor

OFFICERS
ROBERT H. SOMMERVILLE, President JAMES H. MINDS, Vice-President
E. W. HESS, Secretary & TreasurerDIRECTORS
ROBERT H. SOMMERVILLE JOHN W. BARRATT E. W. HESS
JAMES H. MINDS A. S. MOULTROP HARRY A. REED

H. & C. Phone Number 174 Red Phone Number 4

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One Year $2.00 Six Months $1.00
One Month .15 One Month .15

Entered at the Post Office at Clearfield, Pennsylvania, as second class mail matter

CIRCULATION STATEMENT

Average Daily Circulation (January 1, 1915, to May 31, 1915) 2465

ANALYSIS

Portion of the Clearfield Progress 1264
What is the purpose of the Clearfield Progress 659
The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations 82
The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations 2207
The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations 253 2465

The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The Clearfield Progress is a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

TUESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 24, 1915

CONTRABAND COTTON NOT NEARLY

Proposed of the ABE to place cotton on the list of contraband goods is based on the fact that cotton is now an indispensable material for the manufacture of armaments. It has been treated by some writers as a contraband article in 1905, when at war with Japan. The government extended its list of contraband goods to include cotton on the ground that it was employed in the manufacture of explosives. It was contended that cotton for this purpose could not be distinguished from cotton for ordinary purposes and that prohibition was necessary to prohibit its importation after war.

It is interesting to note that Russia took this action against the proposed contraband of cotton, the latter being interested in the export of cotton to Japan. The quantity of raw cotton imported by the British ambassador at St. Petersburg, which might be utilized for explosives would be infinitesimal in comparison with the bulk of the cotton exported from Russia to Japan for peaceful purposes and to treat harmless cargoes of this latter description as unconditionally contraband would be to subject a branch of innocent commerce, which is specially important in the Far East, to a most unwarrantable interference.

If England could so contend in 1905, the United States can offer similar objections now, holding that the amount of American cotton utilized for explosives is very small compared with the bulk of the exported staple and that to treat all shipments as unconditional contraband would subject innocent commerce built upon the world's needs in times of peace to unwarrantable interference. Russia can now consistently declare cotton contraband, but England, in order to justify her course, must show that the employment of the staple in the manufacture of explosives has enormously increased since 1905—and indeed this may be true enough. Doubtless our state department's attitude toward this view of the matter will depend on the practicability of the measures proposed by England to protect American cotton interests from serious injury.

In any case the fact that the world accepted Russia's device making cotton contraband in 1905 apparently settles the question of the legality of such a procedure on the part of the Allies now. What has been done once can be done again. Now that cotton is extensively used in the manufacture of explosives, it would seem to have acquired the contraband character belonging to other articles employed in the production of munitions, and that in taking the proposed action the Allies would exercise a right immemorially claimed by warring nations.

'CONSCIENCE' AND THE LYNCHERS

In the opinion of ex-Governor Slaton, of Georgia, the lynchers of Leo M. Frank were "the scum and raffia of the state." The scum and raffia of a state are found in the slums of the towns and among the most ignorant and shiftless elements of the rural districts. Such people are not usually in command of automobiles. Nor would they be likely to entertain the sentiment demanding that Frank be lynched near the grave of Mary Prager, nor be inclined to take the risks of transporting their victim more than a hundred miles. The whole account suggested the work of young "dare-devils" belonging to at least fairly prosperous families, and when Governor Harris proceeds to "see to it that the members of the mob receive fitting punishment for their crime," he would do well to instruct his detectives to look a little higher than the "scum and raffia" and bring under their searching observation the young men of Marietta and perhaps even of Atlanta.

The Macon, Ga., Telegraph, which stood firmly for law and order during many years previous to its passing into entirely new hands last fall, is quoted as saying that the lynchers of Frank "went ahead with clear consciences." This betrays ignorance of the fact that conscience is developed through the effort to do the right and shun the wrong. With the average inherently savage young "dare-devil" conscience is as yet non-existent, or its burden is so light that he becomes aware of it only at the rarest intervals.

THOMAS EDISON ONLY SLEEPS TWO HOURS A DAY— UNLESS IT HAPPENS TO BE AN EXTRA TANNING GAME !!!

RADIO RUOLPH SAYS—

IF YOU CAN'T AFFORD A JOY RIDE HOW ABOUT A JOY WALK?

ANGER IN THE CITY

THE LIST OF THE CITY

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—"Built around the deep pocket of the Kiel Foeche, a narrow arm of the Baltic Sea that cuts its way back into the province of Holstein, the old city of Kiel lies well-shielded from all hostile attack and centrally placed for the use of the fleet, either upon the open ocean or upon the inland sea," begins a bulletin just prepared by the National Geographic Society.

"This ancient port city is headquarters for German sea strength, the first naval station of the Empire, the point from which the orders have been issued directing the unequal duel between the ships of the Kaiser and the fleets of Britain.

"The great war-harbor of Kiel is one of the finest and most powerfully protected harbors in the world. The sea-arm whose base is enclosed by the port, has a narrow entrance and a long, irregular surface. The entrance and the strategic points along the bank are heavily fortified. Fort Falkenstein and Fort Stosch guard the narrow about 3 1-2 miles above the town. Flanking the northern termination of the new Kiel suburbs, the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, a triumph of patience and engineering cuts its way into the sheltered bay. By means of this canal, Kiel is in close communication with the North Sea, and units of the Kaiser's navy can be transferred rapidly and safely from the war theatre of the open ocean to that of the Baltic.

"The Kaiser Wilhelm Canal or the Baltic ship canal is the product of an idea which ripened through centuries. Projects for connecting the Baltic and North Seas by a water route through the Northern peninsula which should avoid the dangerous voyage around Jutland were considered spasmodically from 1300 on, but it remained to the military necessities of a great empire to bring about the realization of this advantageous waterway for trade. Any number of baneful beginnings of the projected way were made before the construction of the present canal was undertaken by the first German Emperor, Kaiser Wilhelm I laid the foundation stone of the canal in 1887, and the costly avenue was formally declared open by the present Emperor in 1895. The original canal has been extensively improved.

"The canal crosses the peninsula, from Holtenau just beyond the northern suburbs of Kiel to Brunsbüttel at the mouth of the Elbe, at sea level, the locks at either end merely serving to neutralize the tides. It is 60 miles long, with a depth of more than 30 feet and a width sufficient to pass the largest men-of-war. A steamer takes between 8 and 9 hours to pass through the canal, thus bringing the advance German naval base at Heligoland within easy reach of the Kiel headquarters. The whole way at night is lighted by electricity. The first cost of the Baltic Ship Canal was $30,000,000. Other millions have been expended in its improvement. Regular steamer excursion service was maintained here before the war, but the voyage offered little interest besides steep banks and here and there spiritless scenery.

"Great Imperial docks, arsenals and navy yards are located at Kiel, as are also Admiralty headquarters and the Imperial Naval Academy. Foreigners were not admitted to the docks and yards. Many thousands of visitors regularly attended Kiel Week (Kiel Week), the great German regatta held each year during the latter part of June. This regatta was an event of first importance in the world of international sport, and yachts from all nations interested in water sports were usually entered in its famous races. The Yacht Hohenzoellern, housing the Emperor and the Imperial family builded each year the central point of the gay, rich, cosmopolitan throng of sportsmen.

Kiel is one of oldest towns in Holstein. Older parts are badly built, having twisting, narrow, indifferently paved streets and being flanked by gaunt, time-tortured buildings. The new town, however, is filled with handsome structures, and is well-planned. The city has grown in every way industrially, commercially, socially artistically since becoming naval headquarters for the Empire and of the greatest sport event upon the German sport calendar."

CLOTHES PARADE AT BAR HARBOR

BOR

(By United Press)
Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 24.—Summer society folk gave a benefit for summering city folk today. It took the form of a fashion show at the Swimming Club new models in summer and fall wear being displayed by matrons and debutantes.

Safe Milk for Infants and Invalids

HORLICK'S

THE ORIGINAL Malted Milk

The Food-Drink for all Ages

Rich milk, malted grain, in powder form. For infants, invalids and growing children. Pure nutrition, upbuilding for the whole body. Invigorates nursing mothers and the aged. More healthful than tea or coffee.

Unless you say "HORLICK'S" you may get a substitute.

ALL STYLES KLAXON MADE HORNS.

Size	Federal	Casings	Tubes
30x8	$9.35	$10.75	$2.35
30x8 1/2	12.15	13.95	2.70
32x8 1/2	13.95	16.05	2.80
33x4	19.90	22.90	2.90
34x4 1/2	27.05	31.10	5.00
35x4 1/2	28.25	32.50	5.10
36x4	21.65	24.90	4.20
36x4 1/2	28.70	33.00	5.20

Two Styles Hand Horns:

Hand Klaxon, $7.50 Hand Klaxonet, $1

LEE GARAGE CO.

Distributors

Garage, Locust Street Clearfield, Pa.

REPORT PORTRAYS MANY DEPLORABLE LABOR CONDITIONS

Immigration Stopped Because Foreigners Are Better Off at Home—Low Wages Cause

Spy-system, Blacklists and Other Resources of Big Telegraph Companies to Prevent Spread of Unionism Among Their Employees are Cited Examples.

(By United Press)

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—Living and working conditions in industrial America are vividly portrayed and corrective legislation is recommended in the second section of the report of Basil M. Manly, to the United States Commission on Industrial Relations.

The report, which was made public by the Commission in part yesterday was continued today and will be finally put before the people in publication of the third installment on Thursday, was prepared by Manly after exhaustive investigation into every phase of industrial relations by special committee which he headed.

That section released for public enlightenment today says frankly that labor conditions and conditions of labor in the United States are deplorably bad. Comparisons presented from time to time to show that the working people of this country are better off than those of Europe are misleading, the report declares. And evidence is given to prove that the laboring classes in all European countries save Russia, Austria and a few others termed "backward" practically stopped immigrating before the outbreak of the Great War for no other reason than that they could not better their conditions by coming to the United States.

The report finds that the current industrial unrest is caused largely by the payment of wages too low to provide a decent standard of living, and contends that this is in great measure due to the strangling of strong labor organizations by capitalistic combinations.

The spy-system, blacklists and other resources of the big telegraph companies to prevent spread of unionism among their employees are cited examples. The Western Union Telegraph, the Pullman Company, the railroads many big mining concerns and industrial plants have been proven strongly opposed to organization of their employees, the report holds and have dealt labor many hard and unjust blows to discourage it in getting a square deal.

Declaring that only present conditions are pertinent the findings of the committee were that:

Labor is grossly underpaid and should be protected in legitimate organizing to better its conditions; that safety and sanitation measures should be enforced; that hours should be fixed by public service and industrial concerns with an eye to the welfare of the workers as much as to gaining maximum time of service or maximum production for the wages expended; housing conditions should be greatly improved and a standard established.

The report also finds that women and children are exploited in industry, trade domestic service and agriculture to an extent that threatens their welfare and health and the well-being of future generations and that, "their competition with men is a direct menace to the wage and salary standards of men."

Woman Suffrage is held out as one of the things that should be nationally legalized as a means of overcoming that condition.

In many of those industrial communities owned by a corporation or individual a state of feudalism exists. Except that the employer recognizes no specific duty upon his part. The employees are dependent upon the employer for wages, homes and places to purchase life's necessities, with the result that the employer dictates the social and political life of such a community and the "fundamental rights of the citizens are, as a general rule, seriously abridged if not actually denied.

In Colorado such employers have even assumed to refuse to permit the issuance of money orders and the delivery of mail to employees.

The workers are most pitifully subjugated in the turpentine and lumber camps however.

In agriculture the growth of farm tenancy is menacing in that it shows that rapidly agriculture seems to be falling into the hands of the few, that the wages paid farmers are low when the profits of the owners are taken into account.

In the south and southwest particularly it has been found that the landowners are continually demanding more and more of the product from their holdings farmed by "share tenants" who furnish seed tools and teams and then pay to the landlord one-third of the grain or cotton. Many landowners are no longer satisfied with the third, which afforded the farmer of a small parcel of land but a bare living, and there is constantly demand for an increase of the land lords share.

SEALED BIDS

Sealed proposals will be received by the School Board of the Borough of Clearfield until Friday August 27th 1915 at six (6) o'clock p. m. at the office of the Secretary of the board at Clearfield, Pa., for the excavating, furnishing materials and constructing the concrete walls, floors, footings, etc for the High School building on the corner of arket and First streets in the Borough of Clearfield, Pa.

All work and materials used to comply with the requirements of the plans and specifications, which can be seen in the office of the Secretary of the Board or a copy thereof obtained by applying to the architects, Messrs. Harrington and Howard DuBois, Pa.

Each bid to be accompanied with a certified check made payable to the School Board in an amount equal to ten (10) per cent. of the amount of the bid. The successful bidder will be required to furnish a surety bond to be approved by the board.

All certified checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned as soon as the contract is awarded; and to the successful bidder as soon as the contract is signed up and the required bond furnished to the board. The board reserves the right to reject all bids.

A. D. REGLER, President

A. G. KRASNER, Secretary

CANADIAN RACE MEET OPENED (By United Press)

Ottawa, Aug. 24.—A six day meet of the Comaught Park Jockey Club opened today.

A Concrete Garage Ends Fire Dangers

The floor of a concrete garage cannot become covered with oil and the walls cannot burn. Your valuable automobiles will be protected in an everlasting concrete building. We advise you to use only for all concrete work. Our customers have found that it is easy to do good work with ALPHA because it has exceptional binding-power. We guarantee ALPHA to more than meet all standard tests.

ALPHA PORTLAND CEMENT

ALPHA goes further than cheaper cements, because every cubic foot is live and active. Concrete sets in every hour while it is being made, and gains its strength and purity.

We will tell you how to use ALPHA to secure the best results.

CLEARFIELD HARDWARE CO.
CLEARFIELD, PENNA.

Banking By Mail

You know your bonds, insurance policies and other valuable papers are safe, if they are in one of our safe deposit boxes.

Our burglar proof, chrome and bessemer steel lined vault contains boxes of various sizes, which are provided for the use of depositors without charge.

Absolutely privacy is assured, for your key is the only one that will open your box.

You are invited to use County National Bank Service.

The County National Bank of Clearfield, Pa.

The Best Form of Investment

is a savings account in an institution like this, where you not only get "your money back," but with it the accumulation of three per cent. interest, which we compound semi-annually.

The longer you leave it with us the longer you'll like it in the end, the more you'll appreciate the advantage of letting your money work for you as hard as you worked for it. Fuller information on request.

CLEARFIELD TRUST COMPANY

"CLEARFIELD'S PIONEER SAVINGS BANK"

Twenty-Three Years

is a long time for any concern to do business in a city and when the concern happens to be a bank like this, with a multitude of depositors to please, there must be something about it which holds depositors together.

We think its the Courtesy, Security and Friendly Feeling extended to large and small depositors alike. At any rate you are invited to participate in it.

The Clearfield National Bank, "The Bank of Service"

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure
By EMERSON HOUGH
From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1914, by Wright A. Patterson)

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a shop half of a broken coin, the missing inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the printing office of Grahoffen, to place out the advertisement by the inscription. She is arrested, and on arrival in Grahoffen's apartment while chasing the secret of the broken coin begins.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XXIX.

King Cortislaw.
"So you find it convenient to enter my room once more unasked?" Kitty's eyes flashed in genuine indignation as she faced Count Sachio.
"It is not my room, mademoiselle, but ours. We pay for it and have control of it."
"There was some definite purpose in sending me here away from my friends?"
"Assuredly, a purpose very definite, and one from which we do not intend to be swerved, mademoiselle."
"What then do you purpose doing with me?"
"We plan taking you before the king, not the king of Grahoffen, but the king of Cortislaw, as you are called by the inscription. We wish to see you, mademoiselle."
Kitty turned back into the room and Sachio, irritated at the delay, went so far as to take her by the arm to induce her to leave the room with him. She resisted him so vigorously that for the time he stood back nonplussed.

But at length the girl's powers proved so match for those brought against her. She was forced from the room toward the front of the building.

Once more Kitty adopted the policy of Roleau himself—she ceased to struggle when she found struggling useless, and lay back to wait until a hand when resistance might be more effective.

"Very well, then, gentlemen," said she. "Do as you like. I am weaker than yourselves. Since you are men and gentlemen, naturally you are strong."

Count Sachio made no answer to her letting words. In truth, matters had not gone so well with him as he would have liked. He had been ordered to escort her to his own king, and now must make that report, and certainly would not tell of the unequalled success which he had so confidently boasted.

The insignificant distance which separated these two kingdoms was spanned in hours, somewhat to the wonderment of Kitty, schooled in the great distances of her own country.

And in the capital of Grahoffen, a allowed small time to arrange a diet or compose herself after the fatigue of the journey. Very presently she was brought before King Cortislaw himself.

She found him an old man, thin, wrinkled, crabbed, irritable, excitable. Cortislaw regarded the young girl steadily as she stood before him.

"So this is the woman?" he demanded of Count Sachio, who stood humbly by.

"The same, your majesty. She can explain what you desire to know."
The king looked intently at something he held in his hand. Kitty caught sight of it—it was the half coin which she had once possessed, which had been taken from her but lately by these men. Evidently Count Sachio had turned it over forthwith to his royal possessor.

"Mademoiselle," said he, "tell me what it says. The inscription is broken. I wish to know it all. I am informed that you have seen both halves of the coin and therefore know the entire message. Read it to me at once."

Kitty took the coin in her hand as though to study it, but swiftly hid her own hand behind her back as she clutched it.

"It is my property," said she stoutly. "Not even a king can take away my property without cause of law."

effrontery of the young girl—who held her possession until two sturdy guards forced the coin from her hand. The king smiled at her, a somewhat toothless smile.

"So you value it? Many do. We are willing to pay for what we have, mademoiselle—and the message of this coin we mean to have. Give it to us, and you shall be set free."

"Your majesty is liberal—you offer what is already mine—the right to liberty. But what you ask is impossible for me. True, I have seen each half of the coin—even I saw both halves at one time—but never have I read the entire inscription."

"But you have seen both halves," went on Cortislaw. "Tell me, what was on the other half?"

"Your majesty, I cannot—I do not know."
"By the saints of our fathers," exclaimed Cortislaw, "if this were in the old days the torture chamber should show you something. But now—"

"The torture could bring only deception from me, your majesty, and that deception would be of no service to you. I have told you the truth—and that alone can serve you. Give me my liberty again—and then perhaps I might learn more of the other half of the coin."

"The girl argues well," said Cortislaw. "I am not sure whether or not she speaks truth, but her argument goes to the same thing in either case. Let her go under guard—perhaps something may arise to give us further insight into this."

"As for you, Count Sachio, you have not yet succeeded in what was asked of you—you have not yet taught us where lies the hidden treasure of Grahoffen!"

"Your majesty," replied the count, reddening, "it is but inadvertence, which shall be amended. In my zeal I fancied your majesty would rather have this young woman than to have the other half of the coin. To secure that may require yet more time."

The king fixed on him the cold smile which his courtiers had learned to dread, yet he could not fail to see the shrewdness of Sachio's reply.

"At least guard her, then," said he dryly. "She shall be our guest until we learn more of what she knows. It means too much to forego the full reading of that coin these days. I mean to have it. I trust all my officers will realize that fact."

"Mademoiselle," said Sachio to Kitty, later, when she had been withdrawn to quarters which virtually were to prove a prison to her. "You have heard what the king has said—he will allow you to return to your own country unharmed if you but help him to the meaning of that inscription. What is it to you? It is only idle curiosity brings you hither. With us it may mean the life or death of our country."

Kitty gave herself up to certain reflections at the time. As to war between the two kingdoms, if it came, why should she aid Grahoffen against the country with which she had become more familiar? Neither had done her much courtesy, true, but for some strange reason her sympathies were not with the country governed by this irascible and unlovely king.

"Think well, mademoiselle," went on Sachio. "It is a long way from here to your country. The coin can mean but little to you at best."

"It may mean much to me," broke out Kitty suddenly. "Listen. This coin is not the property of your king or of that other king. It is the property of the people of these countries. It seeks to tell them its story—not to any king for his selfish purposes—but it seeks to make known its appeal for justice and liberty. What, think you the people will forever be content to remain a shuttlecock between you two?"

A moment later and he had left her once more to her own devices.

CHAPTER XXX.

King Michael of Grahoffen. Meanwhile in Grahoffen town the people remained irresolute, uncertain, making no further overt attempt at the long-pending revolution. And as they waited their king amused himself after such fashions as had long been his own. Continually he changed, sometimes hoping, again dreading; and as often as he changed he sent for Count Frederick, on whom he leaned in fatuous confidence.

"But, my dear count," he reproached that gentleman one day, "you have left one errand uncompleted. You have brought us our coin back again, that is true, but the young lady who we fancied would come after it still remains absent from our court. There has been no word from her for many days."

"True, your majesty, she has disappeared, it seems. I do not, myself, know where she is."

"You have made inquiry at her usual place of residence—some hotel, was it not? An absurd thing, for such a woman as herself to live in a hotel."

"At her hotel," replied Count Frederick, "they know nothing. They tell me that she comes and goes at all hours, and leaves no word as to her return. Nearly two weeks ago she left, and has not yet returned."

"There may be many reasons," continued the count, "for her continued absence. Perhaps the business upon which she came is not yet completed. Perhaps her employers have called her away. Perhaps she may have been detained by some accident."

"By whom, Count Frederick?"
"Well, she has seemed curious herself regarding the coin. Perhaps she knew somewhat of it."
"So she also has studied this trinket that we gave her? Very well—we meant it to prove of interest."
"Doubtless. But regarding the coin so many threats have been made—"

"Threats? What threats? What do you know of any?"
"Many things come to my ears, your majesty, but I strive to keep them from your own ears so much as may be when I find them unwelcome."

"The most unwelcome thing that could come to us, my dear Frederick, is the absence of this young woman now. Where, think you, she may be?"

"I could not guess, unless perhaps she may have returned to her own country—in which case we shall never see her again, your majesty. We can make examination of the passenger lists of all sailings within the last two weeks. I will look into that. If she has not gone back to her own country, she either remains in this somewhere, or in some other near by."

"You do not mean Grahoffen?"
Count Frederick nodded. "That is what I do mean. In truth, your majesty, there are Grahoffen spies in this city—they were even at your ball. Perhaps they concern themselves with this young lady. Why not? If they suspect that she had part of the coin—and it was easily seen by any that once she did have that part—might they not undertake to make trouble for their own purposes with her?"

"But what good would come of that?"
Count Frederick saw that his argument had gone too far for his own purposes. He did not care to tell the king, all he knew, yet his zeal for Kitty had led him far.

"Much good might come to Grahoffen's war department, your majesty, if they knew our secrets. Perhaps they thought she could give some information."

"But you do not predict trouble between us and our neighbor—you do not mean war?"
"Your majesty, I predict nothing these days, but always it is well to be prepared."

"You disturb me sorely—do not speak to me of war—I cannot endure the thought—I do not wish to hear of it."

As it chanced, much of this conversation came to the ear of one of Sachio's agents, the spy Bartel, still hanging about the city of Grahoffen. He overheard enough in his passing by at the time of this conversation to be advised that the king of Grahoffen intended to make search for the missing American. Not hesitating he himself now sped off for his employer to communicate this news that he had learned.

He found Sachio aloof and discontented, out of favor in the court, and somewhat at a loss what next to do. At the thought of a definite demand on the part of King Michael—or rather on the part of Count Frederick—upon their kingdom for the person of the young girl, Sachio grew somewhat grave. "This," said he, "is a matter for the king."

But the king was in no too good humor over all these failures. "What, Sachio," said he, "you come to me once more with these old woman's tales? If your time is so short before your secret is discovered, then all the more reason for diligence on your part. It is not the business of kings to accept reasons for failure in performance. The girl is still available—complete your errand with her—bring to me the reading of the coin. I know well enough that if Count Frederick comes he will be different from his king."

Therefore once more Sachio went back to his bootless interviews with Kitty, once more pleading with her to give him all knowledge she had of the coin. And once more Kitty could no more than reassure him of her own ignorance of what he wished to know.

She heard odds and ends of information which taught her which way the wind sat at Grahoffen capital. Sometimes she heard Sachio, again Bartel, again this or that man, speaking freely of the plans at hand.

"I told the king," said Bartel one time, speaking to Count Sachio, "that it is ripe for the shaking of the area. I told him that we have full plans of all their fortifications and defenses—that their resistance will be but nominal. Once we get the Grahoffen coffers opened, times will be easier in our country."

"Yes, once you get," rejoined Sachio grimly. "But tell us how!"
Kitty, really owing allegiance to neither of these kingdoms, both of which had done her such repeated injustice, hardly stopped to ask herself why she found her own leanings towards Grahoffen, the scene of most of the indignities she had met.

She must escape for every reason—so she assured herself. But how?
From the windows she had a full view of the well-kept grounds of the palace and of the boulevards surrounding it. She stood alone one day staring out on scenes grown familiar to her. But all at once her gaze grew more intent, fixed upon some object not far away. A car was standing at the curb. She did not remember to have seen it there regularly.

The two giant grenadiers to whom had been assigned the duty of watching after her in her wanderings regarded her as little more than a child, and they smiled as now she pushed past them through the door which led out to the gardens. She walked out to the car which stood at the curb, regarding it curiously, as though it were the first car she had ever seen in her life—something very far from true.

What the guards, who smilingly regarded her through the windows, saw was a swift leap of the girl to the driver's seat, her rapid movements with the controlling levers as she cut on the spark, gave the car gas, threw in the clutch, threw open the throttle, and the car sped off like a shot.

her roaring her own defiance to pursue. Hue and cry now through all the halls of Grahoffen palace, and general uproar. Count Sachio, never too far away, was promptly on the spot. When he saw what had happened he cursed the two grenadiers with all his ardent soul. Even the king, himself, aroused from his midday slumbers, joined in these scenes of excitement.

"What has happened—what is all this about?" he demanded.
The trembling guards scarcely dared tell him the truth.

"What, she has escaped—that prisoner!" She was of more importance than any held here in our own remembrance. You shall all be held to account for this. How now, Count Sachio, did we not give her into your immediate charge?"

"Your majesty, you did. I dare no explanation of her escape. Only—she is gone."
"And with her our only hope of success in the ambitions of this kingdom."

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than an out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit.

Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.

He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. "As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her!"

"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"

The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its

"And you dared give him such access?"
"We dared not do less, excellency. He was most courteous in one way, asked many questions regarding your self, but as to search of your apartments he made none, or next to none. He seemed to care for nothing that he saw, save one little picture, a portrait."

Kitty remained but briefly in her own rooms. She took a swift glance about. Everything seemed in place, much as she had left it—no search apparently had been made of any of the cabinets or drawers. There had been a little picture—one of herself—left on the dressing table. It was gone! She missed nothing else.

CHAPTER XXXI.
In the Name of the King.
It was plain enough to Count Sachio which way Kitty would head in her flight. Her car was little more than an out of sight on the Grahoffen road, ere Sachio himself was in pursuit.

Count Sachio himself was no blunderer, and no common thief-chaser, but a courier and a man of intelligence. He knew it would be futile to make a direct demand of the hotel management regarding the whereabouts of the young American. Therefore, while he himself approached the hotel desk to engage the clerks in conversation, he sent two of his own men—one of them Bartel, the spy, who had been established here so long—by way of a rear staircase to find Kitty's room and report to him what they learned.

He stood for some time making polite speeches with the desk men and the porters, asking for certain information as to routes and distances, but all the time burning with impatience that he heard no report from his messengers. "As he stood, there came news of them—startling news enough. There came shrieking down the stairs, incoherent, babbling, a maid who called out to the clerk, or to any who would hear her!"

"A man," she cried—"A man—killed in her room—the young American's room—murdered—it is murder, I tell you!"

The officials of the hotel took prompt action.
"Close all the doors," ordered the porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

openly displayed, was a picture in a little frame—a frame of silver set in brilliant gems. She looked at it suddenly—it was the portrait of herself which once had stood on her own dressing table in her hotel! Now it was here. Why? Kitty felt a strange flush come to her face.

Something now arrested her—she paused, reluctant to resume a search which ever had been distasteful to her. No, she would not touch a thing—had he not done as much for her—had he not been more respectful than herself of another's privacy? If he had taken anything from her apartments it was but—this. And apparently he had cherished it. No, she would not search for the coin. She would leave this country disappointed, if need be.

But there lay, just at the foot of the little portrait, an object which caught her eye. It was the half coin of Grahoffen!

Yes, here it was in full view, openly displayed, that any might see it who liked, who chanced to be there. Apparently Count Frederick felt that all pursuit of the coin had ended—that no longer could any intruder gain access to his palace.

Kitty hesitated for a moment. The appeal of the coin came to her once more. She took it up, held it in her hand, gazed at it—and once more, as so often had been the case—she found herself surprised at the very moment of her success.

She heard Count Frederick's quiet footsteps, his calm voice behind her. "Mademoiselle, again!"
The count stood there regarding her.

"Evidently, mademoiselle, you did not realize that these repeated visits rendered necessary the installation of an electric system of my own devising—you see, I knew of your presence, and as you see, I have come. You rang. Of what service can I be, mademoiselle?"

"Leave me alone," panted Kitty, her face hot, tears almost in her eyes. "I hate you! I hate you!"

"I grieve at that, mademoiselle," said Count Frederick evenly. "I wish I could say the same of you—but I cannot. With every reason to distrust you—I cannot. Continually we cross swords, do we not? And you were easy to deceive this time. See—you are trapped as simply as a bird which steps into its cage without hesitation."

"Will you not give me back my coin, mademoiselle? Will you not add it to the other? Will you not assist me in reading the message of the coin, so that we may make an end of all this—so that we may not continually cross swords with one another?"

In answer Kitty darted past him, found her way into the hall, ran she knew not where. Before her lay a little narrow stairway, and she sprang up it, hoping to find egress somewhere. Alas! the door that closed the head of the stair was locked. She heard his low laugh as an iron grille snapped across the opening, cutting off escape.

"Won't you give it to me now—my coin?" he asked.
Silence reigned in the great white

porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its porter. "Clear the corridors at once, in the king's name. Apprehend the murderer whoever it may be. Have the grenadiers come at once. You, boy—run I say!"

It was hue and cry once more, and Sachio was glad enough that his own alibi was plain, for he knew not what now might happen. One of his men rejoined him—the spy Bartel. The other remained behind—his fate unknown as yet.

As for Kitty, she was at this moment once more away from her hotel and once more in the stately palace of Count Frederick.

She entered softly, leaving Roleau as usual somewhat remote, to guard against any sudden intrusion. She more she cast about a searching gaze upon the details of the place. All its

QUARREL AT CAMEL FATAL TO Altoona Man Victim of Hands of Man With Whom He Playing.

Stabbed about the body and then in the heart with a two-edged knife by his comrade Michael (name), Antonio Signore fell fatally wounded the victim of a game of cards Sunday evening, at Altoona.

Many of the people residing in the neighborhood witnessed some acts of the crime, as Signore ran down the avenue, closely pursued by his companion, who escaped, and then fell on a walk where he died with a knife clutched in his hand stained with the blood of the murderer.

Police conducted a search for Signore throughout the night but at an early hour in the morning he was still at large. It was thought at that a third man was implicated in the crime, but this theory was abandoned by the authorities following a more thorough investigation.

MERCHANTS EAT BREVIES
(By United Press)
Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 24.—The annual meeting of the Alabama Merchants Association opened here today with a barbecue at East Lake, tomorrow night W. P. G. Harding, of the Federal Reserve board will speak.

$1000 BAI LPOR CHICKEN
SUFFER POT
Los Angeles, Aug. 24.—So that county jail prisoner might enjoy twenty-five cent chicken dinner which advertised here, the café proprietor went the man's bond, furnished $1000 bail and escorted the prisoner back to jail after the feast. Then the café proprietor's money was returned and the captive sang the praises of that chicken dinner to every other unfortunate in his "hole."

TWO YEAR OLD SENT BY PARCELS POST
 Fargo, N. D., Aug. 24.—Postal authorities today expressed appreciation that postal limitations forbidding being sent by parcel post. From two-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Colby has just completed a journey by parcels post from Fargo City, N. D., to Fargo. The "shipment" was treated as ordinary "breakable and perishable" mail.

marble palace of Count Frederick in Grahoffen.

And now, far off in other parts of the city, where men sought one who had done a crime, there rose in the streets the sound of hurrying feet with the warning cry, "In the name of the king!"

(To Be Continued.)

CLEARFIELD WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 1

At The Driving Park

The Big Show With The Punch

101 RANCH REAL WILD WEST

WILD WEST CIRCUS CHAMPIONS
750
HORSES & PEOPLE
3 TRAINS
50 CARS
DAILY RAIN OR SHINE
2:15 PM
5:15 PM
STREET PARADE
10:30 AM

INDIAN CONGRESS
3 BIG SHOWS
COMBINED FOR ONE TICKET

REAL CHAMPION COWBOYS CONTESTS MEXICANS
AUSTRALIANS
RUSSIAN CONTESTS
101 RANCH
AND MORE

AND WORLD'S CHAMPION
JESS WILLARD
(HIMSELF)
Positively Appearing at Every Performance

THE COWBOY CHAMPION

DON'T MISS THE BIG MORNING PARADE

Reserved seats show day at Deoley & Stewart's Drug store, opposite Court House, at the same price as on show days.

Kitty Tries to Make Friends With the Old Keeper.

Kitty Escapes From the Palace.

Gossip for Tonight's Tea Table

Miss Grace Ross is at Philipsburg on a visit to relatives and friends.

Miss Martha Hames was over at Philipsburg from Clearfield to spend the Sabbath with her parents.

Miss Catherine Hile of Philipsburg has been spending a few days with Clearfield friends.

Miss Esther Brumbaugh, who had been visiting friends at Philipsburg and at Clearfield, has returned to her home at Jersey Shore.

David Campbell, of Philipsburg, terminated business in town yesterday.

Miss Sarah Mulgrew and brother, Joseph, have returned to DuBois after a pleasant visit with their sister, Mrs. Joseph Aelzander, of Second street.

Mrs. N. J. Fletcher, of Second street, has returned from a week's visit to Bradford, Pa.

Miss Vera Ogden is visiting friends in Salona, Pa.

Leslie A. Bartole and Banks Smith are spending their vacations with relatives and friends in Watonsville during "Old Home Week."

Miss Anna Shoff left this morning for Johnstown.

Leslie Shrago, of Williamsport, has returned home after a visit with friends in Clearfield.

Paul Shoff, of Portage, is spending his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Shoff, of Ogden avenue.

Miss Violet Hughes left this morning for her home in Williamsport after an extended visit with her uncle, E. R. Hughes, of Second street.

Miss Sarah Cummings, of New Washington, a former teacher in the Clearfield High School, is attending her sister at the hospital who is getting along nicely since her operation last Saturday.

Aaron Clark of Glen Campbell, and John Dutton, of West Market street, moved to Patchinville yesterday where they expect to visit for several days.

Miss Elizabeth Irwin and Miss Emma, of Curwensville, were shopping in town today.

Mrs. Henry Van Valsah, of Tyrone, is visiting friends and relatives in town.

Miss Jane McKelvey and Miss Ada Morris have just returned from a visit with friends in Bradford.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Wood, of Altoona, are visiting at the home of David McGarvey on Pine Street.

Robert Coxier, of La Jose, was business visitors to town today.

Marion Hess has returned to his work in E. W. Hess' office after a two weeks' vacation.

Bud Lee and Reilly Lytle attended the New Millport picnic today.

Miss Salome Davis left Monday morning for Railroad, York county, where she is employed for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Davis, U. F. Davis, and family of Grampian, and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Albert, of Woodhead, spent Sunday at the home of W. E. Davis, on Guelich avenue.

Miss Edna Fullington and Miss Orval L. Davis are attending the Sunday school convention at DuBois this week.

Mrs. Annie E. Means left on the 7:30 train Monday evening to attend the funeral of her brother Albert H. Goodwin, of Ayondale, Chester county.

P. O. S. of A. Picnic At Mineral Springs

To the members and friends of Woodland, Clearfield and Grampian camps of the Patriotic Order Sons of America. A district picnic will be held at Mineral Springs park on September 4, commencing at 10:30 o'clock. There will be amusement at the park, and a baseball game between the different camps. Speaking at 7:30 P. M. in the Pavilion.

Ice cream will be served to all members and their families at supper. Come and enjoy an evening in the open air, and get acquainted. All trains stop at the Park. Committee.

E. J. Turner,
H. B. Peters.

CLEARFIELD, ITALIAN BAND 30 PIECES SALVATORE IMPALOMENI, Leader

Open for engagements anywhere at any time. Rates Reasonable.

For terms write to THOMAS J. SPINGOLA, Manager, P. O. Box, Clearfield, Pa.

M. & C. Phone 192-2

DR. ANNA SHAW TO BE IN TOWN AUGUST 30—TOUR

Will Make Thirty Speeches In State—Tours Four States.

The most forceful and eloquent speaker of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw will speak in Clearfield on August 30 under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage Association. She will devote the week of August 30 to September 6 inclusive in this state.

Miss Shaw has volunteered this campaign to the cause as her personal contribution. She will deliver thirty speeches in each of the four states which vote on suffrage this year, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Massachusetts. She has refused to accept personal fees for any of these 120 speeches.

In the varied career of her 68 years Miss Shaw has done practical work in as many lines as three or four ordinary men or women could successfully engage in. She has been a school teacher, an ordained minister of the Gospel, a practicing physician and a suffrage lecturer and campaigner. She has spoken for the cause in every state in the Union. Her personality and eloquence are said to have done more to advance the interests of women and children than have the efforts of any other worker.

Wit and humor make her speeches as entertaining as they are effective. She is so much in demand that it has been necessary to arrange a "whirlwind" campaign of the most strenuous kind in order to permit even a small portion of the people of the state to hear her.

IN PERIL of their lives Kitty Gray and her faithful follower galloped madly through the darkness followed relentlessly by their foes. Apparently nothing can save them from capture, but once again fate favors the brave.

However, she has still a long and thrilling search before her. Many dangers lie in her path. From now on she is determined at any cost to free her friends from the clutches of the evil forces.

How will it all end? The whole story is told in the thrilling picture serial THE BROKEN COIN.

Follow this great picture story through every phase of breathless, stirring adventure. Kitty Gray has literally taken the whole country by storm. Take your family every week to see this masterpiece of photo play achievement, written by the clearest of fiction writers and played by a company of brilliant Universal photo play stars.

See THE BROKEN COIN Every Week The Photo Play Serial Supreme 15 Episodes—One Each Week

New Opera House Wednesday Night

THE BROKEN COIN

Read It In This Issue

UNIVERSAL

FUNNY LEE MORAN, The Famous

JESS WILLARD PUTS A PUNCH IN THE ARENA OF CIRCUS

While Jess Willard, the cowboy world's champion, puts a big "punch" in the performances of Miller Bros. & Arlington's 101 Ranch Wild West show, which comes to Clearfield, Wednesday September 1, the cowgirls constitute a very important part of the company of strenuous people who give vim to the exhibition.

The cowboys are usually associated in the public mind with the liveliest and most daring portions of the Wild West program. As a matter of fact, it is declared, there is scarcely anything in the way of roughriding accomplished by the most reckless cowpunchers that is not duplicated by the girls in the show. The riskiness of the real cowgirl is proverbial, and instead of urging them to perform daredevil feats, the management, it is declared, is constantly under the necessity of cautioning them against risking their lives and limbs.

In the 101 Ranch show the cowgirls are always very much in evidence. They participate in the exhilarating and dangerous roundup of wild steers which is one of the distinctive features of the show; they ride wild steers as well as rope them; they accomplish wonderful feats in high-school horsemanship, and with it all they give a feminine touch to the performance that adds distinctly to its attractiveness.

JESS WILLARD

There are, it is announced, about fifty cowgirls with the 101 Ranch show, and their strenuous riding, their picturesque ranch attire and their around cleverness add something to the show that would be otherwise significantly missed.

The cowgirls, the cowboys, the Indians, the Mexicans, and all the other ranch people will be seen in what is said to be the most exciting performance ever seen in a Wild arena, while the appearance of Jess Willard in his role as a cowboy, and, later, in ring costume with one of his sparring partners, will give a "punch" to the performance that no other Wild West show has ever had. All the 101 Ranch notables will be seen in the free street parade that takes place at 10:30 on the morning of show day.

WANTED—A good capable man wants work as a janitor, or looking after furnaces in winter. Apply J. G. Progress office.

JOHN E. JOHNSON DUBOIS, PA.

For Prothonotary

Subject to Decision of The Voters of The Republican Primary Election, September 21, 1915.

ANNUAL CONVENT'N OF GOVERNORS OF U. S. AT BOSTON

Gathering Meets This Morning—Address of Welcome by Governor of Mass

Every Convenience Arranged—Personal Aide to Every Governor and Ex-Governor, Expenses Paid, Naval Militia Ship to Take Guests on Harbor Trip.

(By United Press)

Boston, Aug. 24.—The eighth annual conference of the governors of the United States convened here today for a four days meeting. The visiting state executives were greeted with an address of welcome by Governor Walsh of Massachusetts at a reception opening the conference, which was responded to by Governor Spry of Utah. Mayor Curley of Boston also welcomed the visitors.

About 25 governors and 15 former governors attended the conference. Governor Walsh is chairman of the executive committee in charge of the conference and a committee of prominent citizens was appointed by him to assist in entertaining the visitors. He announced that he planned to combine with the business of the conference numerous social features, including mobilization of the state militia with a parade and half holiday; the furnishing of a militia officer to act as personal aide to every governor and ex-governor; the payment by the state of the expenses of the visitors; the use of a battleship or the naval militia training ship, cruiser Chicago, to take the guests on a harbor trip, and a public reception to-night at the state house.

The following program had been prepared: 10:30 a. m. Reception to visitors with address of welcome by Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley. Response by Governor Spry of Utah; 2 p. m. papers by former Governor Emmet O'Neal of Alabama, "Possibilities of the Governors' Conference" and Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado, "State or National Control of Waterpower Sites"; 4 p. m. Automobile tour of the park system; 8:00 p. m., public reception at state house.

Wednesday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor E. L. Williams of Oklahoma, "The Executive Budget," and Governor Moses Alexander of Idaho, subject to be announced; 2 p. m. papers by former Governor Cole L. Blease of South Carolina, "The Duty and Responsibility of the Governor in Dealing with Prisoners," and Governor W. S. Hammond of Minnesota, "Economy and Efficiency in the State"; 4 p. m. North Shore automobile drive including shore dinner at the Eastern Yacht Club, Marblehead.

Thursday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor H. C. Stuart of Virginia, "Taxation," former Governor John A. Dix of New York, "Conservation of Man and of Natural Resources," and former Governor William Hodges Mann of Virginia, subject to be announced; 2 p. m. papers by Governor Charles S. Whitman of New York, subject to be announced, and former Governor Bliss M. Ammons of Colorado, whose subjects was also announced 4 p. m. automobile trip to Concord and Lexington; 8 p. m. Executive session, which will select the next meeting place, elect an executive committee, secretary and treasurer.

Friday, 10 a. m. papers by Governor James F. Fielder of New Jersey, "What Should Be the State's Duty in the matter of National Defense?" and a farewell address by Secretary of War Garrison; 1:30 p. m. harbor trip with dinner and an inspection sail through the Cape Cod canal.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS There will be a meeting of the Registered Republican voters of Clearfield borough in the Arbitration room at the court house on Tuesday evening, August 24th, at 8:00 o'clock. All persons registered Republican are urged to be present.

JOHN M. BAIN, Secty. Boro. Rep. Com.

ANNA PAVLOVA, The Famous Dancer

A "Hummer Story In North American Begins Thursday

A serial story constructed along entirely new lines will begin in The North American for Thursday, August 26, and be continued a chapter a day. The title of the story is "Neal of the Navy," the author is William Hamilton Osborne, one of the leading American creators of fiction. Incident after incident of the most thrilling character combine to make the story grip the attention of the reader, and motion pictures based upon these incidents will be shown in leading theaters, thus heightening the interest of the reader.

The first episode of the story—the first six instalments and his first two reels of the motion picture—are based upon the catastrophe of Mount Pelee, and so successfully have they been written and planned that they send the story off at a rattling gait. The picture of the scenes described will include many feet of real volcanic eruption, one of the most marvelous bits of action ever shown on the screen.

"Neal of the Navy" represents another departure. Never before has a writer of the standing of Mr. Osborne written an original story with the purpose of having it screened. It marks a new departure and a new class of motion-picture play.

FAKE MAGAZINE AGENT CAUGHT IN DUBOIS As a Side Line Carried on Business of Misleading Girls

A young swindler by the name of H. J. Obershaw, together with two girls, has been doing the people of DuBois, Punxsutawney and surrounding towns out of considerable money by soliciting subscriptions for various magazines.

The fraud was discovered last week and the man, together with the girls, one of whom he called his wife, was arrested and given a hearing. He was fined and told to get out of town. The charges were not pressed seriously because of the absence of the persons who had been swindled and the representative of the company who had discovered the fraud.

A side line of his business was evidently that of misleading young girls as he had made efforts to get some of the girls about DuBois to work for him offering them great inducements and telling them how easy it was to make money.

COUNTY S.S. ASS'N. MEETS AT MT. ZION

Delegates From All Sunday Schools Expected at DuBois Today

The Clearfield County Sabbath school association in the forty-first annual convention of that association will assemble at the Mt. Zion M. E. church, DuBois, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Delegates from nearly all the Sunday schools in this district will be represented. Ministers or the county, district secretaries will also be in attendance.

The meeting will be presided over by H. A. Reed, county president. The program for the day follows:

2:00 Devotions, led by Dr. C. W. Miner, DuBois.

2:30 President's period, H. A. Reed, Mahaffey.

2:50 Open discussion on the subjects: "A New Record in Church Accessions and How It Was Made."

3:20 "The Sunday School of the Open Country," Rev. O. B. Poulson, Wallacetown.

4:00 Church federation period. Appointment of committees.

This Evening.

7:00 Song service.

8:00 "The Sunday School on the Foreign Field," Rev. E. D. Parkhill, Curwensville.

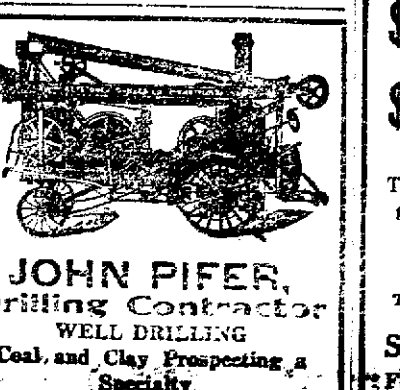

8:30 "Safety First," General Secretary, W. G. Landes, Philadelphia.

Announcement and benediction.

CHILDREN IN NEED OF CLOTHING FOR SCHOOL

The Children's Aid society, having a number of children who they are preparing to send to school are in need of suitable clothing, especially boys clothing to fit the youngsters out properly.

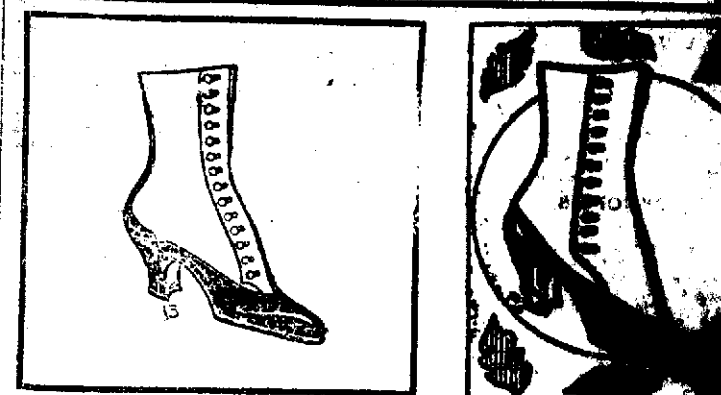

They have in their boarding home 15 children ranging in ages from two years to fourteen years. Any donations will be greatly appreciated and can be sent either to the home or to any of the following ladies: Mrs. W. O. Wilson, chairman of the society, Mrs. W. I. Swoope, Mrs. A. E. Leitzinger or Mrs. Fred Betts.

JOHN PIFER, Drilling Contractor

Fall Shoe Styles

We are now showing the late Fall styles for Men and Women. Everything new in Shoes.

School Shoes for Children in all styles and prices, lots of bargains.

We still have a lot of Men's $4.00, $3.00 and Shoes in good style at

A lot of Men's $3.00 Shoes for work and dress.

A lot of Women's $3.00 Dress Shoes in patent dull leathers now

Brown's Boot Shoe

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Prothonotary We are authorized to announce JOHN H. MOORE, of Clearfield, as a candidate for prothonotary, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-11-15

Register and Recorder We are authorized to announce ED. B. CHASE, of Clearfield, as a candidate for Register and Recorder, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-10-15.

Register and Recorder We are authorized to announce TONE EVANS, of DuBois, as a candidate for Register and Recorder, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 6-7-15.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce OLIVER S. McCLOSKEY, of Curwensville, as a candidate for County Commissioner, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. 4-1-15.

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER We are authorized to announce WM. M. TEMPLETON as a candidate for County Commissioner, of Lawrence township, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election. P. O. Address, Hyde, Pa.

PROTHONOTARY We are authorized to announce JAMES M. GALLAHER, of Clearfield, as a candidate for Prothonotary subject to the rules of the Republican primary election.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce HARRY L. JONES, of Kylertown, as a candidate for County Commissioner subject to the rules of the Republican primary election—s. o. d.

County Commissioner We are authorized to announce H. H. SPENCER, of DuBois, as a candidate for County Commissioner, subject to the rules of the Republican primary election.

CLASS

EMPLOYMENT WANTED WANTED—Nursing to do by the week. Inquire 212 West Ave. Aug. 16 15.

WANTED—Position doing house work. Have had good experience and training. Elizabeth 615 Merril St.

WANTED—Position in office. clerk by young man 17 years. Have completed three years school course. Address care of Progress office.

HELP WANTED WANTED—Competent man Apply at Progress.

WANTED—Young lady for fountain. Apply Deady & Co. 8-23 15.

FOR SALE—A team of mules, wagon and complete outfit. Apply Frank Spingola, 14th and street. A 25-25 p.

FOR SALE FOR SALE—A horse eight old, good driver and would do a good work horse. Inquire Cleaver, Curwensville. Aug. 15, 15.

FOR RENT FOR RENT—Two furnished apartments suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

FOR RENT FOR RENT—Two furnished apartments suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

FOR RENT FOR RENT—Two furnished apartments suitable for light housekeeping. Apply 408 Second street.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD SIXTEEN-DAY EXCURSIONS September 2, 1915

$ 8.00 or Atlantic City, Cape May
$10.00 to Wildwood, Wildwood Crest, Aspleen, Holly Beach,
$10.00 to Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Avalon, Stone Harbor, N. J.
$12.00 to Rehoboth, Del., and Ocean City, Md.

Asbury Park, Long Branch
West End, Hollywood, Elberon, Deal Beach, Absecon,
North Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Bradley Beach,
Avon, Belmar, Como, Spring Lake, Sea Girt, Eatonsville,
Point Pleasant, Manasquan, and Bay Head, N. J.
From Clearfield

Tickets at the lower fare good only in Coaches. Tickets at the higher fare good in Parlor or Sleeping Cars in connection with proper Pullman tickets.

Special Daylight Train of Parlor Cars and Coaches Through to Atlantic City

Tickets good for passage on Special Train or on train leaving Pittsburgh at 4:35 P. M., 8:30 P. M., Coaches only, and 8:50 P. M., Sleeping Cars only, and their connections.

Stop-Over at Philadelphia and Harrisburg Returning

For leaving times of Special and regular trains, stop-over privileges and full information, consult nearest Ticket Agent, or E. Yungman, Station Passenger Agent, Room 215 Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.